

PhD Students Preparation and Presentation Workshop 2017:

The course is designed for the 2nd year students who are starting out their research projects. It lasts for 10 hours.

The goal of the course is to teach 2nd year PhD students the basic skills required for conducting top-level research in Economics, writing a PhD thesis, communicating PhD research to others, and interacting with the academic community. We also give an introduction to some of the basic tasks, responsibilities and duties of being an academic. Finally, the course is intended to support students in the first stages of their written PhD work, which leads to the second year forum, by providing structured advice and discussion, and by stimulating discussion among students about their work. A particular focus will be on how to present and communicate work to others, either in written form, or in presentations and seminars.