

SELECTED PROBLEMS OF IR THEORY

Fall Semester 2009

Prof. F. Kratochwil

Tuesdays, 17.15-19.15

Room 4

The purpose of this course is to introduce the students to some of the important debates in the field and to its basic concepts. It is expected that all students have read the assignments before each class and participate in the discussion with focused and pertinent contributions.

Course requirements and participation

There are three ways in which students can participate:

- 1) The student does all the readings, participates in class discussions, and write a paper. In that case the student will get full credit for the seminar and fulfils one of the departmental requirements.
- 2) The student does all the readings and participates in the class discussions. In this case the seminar requirements are met but not the paper requirement by the department.
- 3) This option is subject to explicit approval, since students taking options 1 and 2 have priority: The student “window shops” and participates only in the sessions that meet his/her interests, assuming of course familiarity with the assigned readings.

Students participating with either option 1 or 2 are not to miss more than two sessions. Otherwise they will not fulfil the seminar requirements. Since emergencies happen, it is suggested that students use their “wild cards” wisely.
