Description

This seminar is an intermediate/advanced class on qualitative methods; it builds upon but goes beyond the SPS introductory qualitative methods course. We begin – Part I – with three sessions on foundational issues: philosophy and ethics. Philosophically, the action in recent years has been more at the level of ontology than epistemology; we thus consider the widespread adoption of relational ontologies and their implications for both method and ethics. For research ethics, we explore both its multiple meta-theoretical foundations (deontological / consequentialist / feminist / post-colonial) and its varying practice across qualitative and quantitative-computational methods and experimental designs.

In Part II – the seminar’s core – we drill down and explore the contours and debates over a selection of key qualitative methods. These include sessions on field work and multi-sited approaches; interpretive interview methods (relational, life history, ethnographic); discourse textual methods (genealogical, critical, post-structural); and advanced methods for capturing process, albeit with the latter understood in quite different ways (Bayesian process tracing, practice tracing, following methods).

We conclude – Part III – by zooming back out from particular methods. One session thus explores the debate over research transparency and its implications for all qualitative methods. Our last meeting then zooms out to the level of practice, with researchers debating their operationalization of a qualitative method/topic in a half-day workshop.

The seminar is worth 20 credits.

Learning Outcomes

- An understanding of the varying links among philosophy, research ethics and your choice and ethical use of a particular method/design.
- For the key qualitative methods – field work and multi-sited approaches; interpretive interview methods; discourse textual methods; advanced process methods – an appreciation of the method’s content, its strengths and weaknesses, and its philosophical and ethical foundations.
- An understanding of the central – and growing – importance of transparency in qualitative methods, and the trade-offs necessary to attain this goal.

Format

The class will be run as a seminar, where debate and discussion are the norm. For Sessions 2– 9, response memos – prepared by 1-2 researchers for each session – will inform and guide our debates. At the beginning of each session, we will use these memos, as well as input from other seminar participants to craft a ‘bottom up’ agenda for that day’s topic and readings.

For session 10 – our brainstorming workshop – researchers take ownership of a particular qualitative method (post-structural discourse analysis, say) or topic (the ethics of on-line ethnography, for example), which are then debated and critiqued in 30-minute slots. The raw material for the workshop will be an 8-10 page essay – which is typically an elaboration of an earlier response memo.

Readings

Key texts for the seminar include the following.

- Bennett, Andrew and Jeffrey T. Checkel, Editors, Process Tracing: From Metaphor to Analytic Tool (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2015)
- Cyr, Jennifer and Sara Wallace Goodman, Editors, Doing Good Qualitative Research (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2024)
- Der Derian, James and Alexander Wendt, Editors, Quantum International Relations: A Human Science for World Politics (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2022)
- Fairfield, Tasha and Andrew E. Charman, Social Inquiry and Bayesian Inference: Rethinking Qualitative Research (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2022)
- Fujii, Lee Ann, Interviewing in Social Science Research: A Relational Approach (London: Routledge, 2017)
- Hansen, Lene, Security as Practice: Discourse Analysis and the Bosnian War (London: Routledge, 2006)
- Iltis, Ana S. and Douglas MacKay, Editors, The Oxford Handbook of Research Ethics (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2020)

- Katzenstein, Peter J., Editor, Uncertainty and its Discontents: Worldviews in World Politics (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2022)
- Procter, Caitlin and Branwen Spector, Editors, Inclusive Ethnography: Making Fieldwork Safer, Healthier and More Ethical (London: Sage Publications, 2024)
- Simmons, Erica and Nicholas Smith, Editors, Rethinking Comparison: Innovative Methods for Qualitative Political Inquiry (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2021)

Seminar readings are accessible in a variety of ways.

- Books & Chapters in Books: Most books are available electronically from the EUI Library. In the reading list below, these are indicated by (E-Book); this provides the direct hyperlink to the book.
- Difficult-to-Access Materials: This includes readings that are difficult – or impossible – to access electronically. Nearly all of these will be uploaded to the seminar Brightspace page.
- Journal Articles: These are easily obtained electronically through the EUI Library.

If you encounter any problems accessing seminar readings, please contact Pia Dittmar.

Requirements

There are three requirements; to receive credit for the seminar, you need a passing mark in all three.

- 1) Seminar Discussions: This is a PhD seminar, and your active participation on a regular basis is required and mandatory. I cannot stress enough the (pedagogic) importance of this requirement.
- 2) Response Memos: Each researcher must prepare two response memos, choosing from the topics and readings covered in two of the eight available sessions (2–9). Each memo should be three pages (double-spaced); it should assess, critique and raise questions on one or more of the readings for a given week.

The memos should be uploaded to Brightspace by 12.00/noon on the Friday before our Monday meeting. These memos – and their authors (☺) – will then guide and structure our discussions.

- 3) Qualitative Methods in Action: For our brainstorming workshop (session #10; Monday, 9 December), each researcher should prepare an 8-10 page essay. For most of you, this longer essay will simply be an elaboration of an earlier response memo. These essays should be uploaded to the seminar Brightspace page by 12.00/noon on Friday, 6 December.

Do not sweat these essays! They are intended as first efforts to make operational – in full draft form – some method (relational/ethnographic interviewing, say) or topic (the tricky ethics of using social media and big data) about which you care deeply, or need for the thesis.

Schedule

- Session 1 (30 September) – Philosophy of Social Science / Relational Ontologies: Implications for Method & Ethics
- Session 2 (7 October) – Ethical Foundations: Consequentialist, De-Ontological, Feminist, Post-Colonial, Relational
- Session 3 (14 October) – Ethical Practices: Qualitative, Quantitative-Computational, Experimental
- Session 4 (21 October) – Accessing the Field: Multi-Sited Approaches
- Session 5 (28 October) – Interpretive/Immersive Interview Methods: Relational, Life History, Ethnographic
- ### 4 November – No Class ###
- Session 6 (11 November) – Discourse Methods: Genealogical, Critical, Post-Structural
- Session 7 (18 November) – Process Analytics I (Critical Realist): Process Tracing, Bayesian Process Tracing
- Session 8 (25 November) – Process Analytics II (Interpretive): Practice Tracing, Following Methods
- Session 9 (2 December) – Research Transparency & Qualitative Methods
- Session 10 (9 December) – Qualitative Methods in Action: Brainstorming Workshop
