In this workshop graduate and post-graduate researchers will develop an experimental design and run a pilot experiment with other researchers as participants. They will analyze the data and present the results. This aims to provide a hands-on experience in running a research experiment in social science. Jeroen van de Ven from the University of Amsterdam (UvA) and Arthur Schram (ECO/UvA) have been invited to lead this hands-on experience.

Students of ECO can take this course for half credit. To do so, they need to submit an essay after the workshop. More information is available from Arthur Schram.
