THE MAX WEBER

STUDIES

ANNUAL REPORT
ON ACADEMIC YEAR
2011/12

FOREWORD

Ramon Marimon,
Director of the
Max Weber Programme

The Max Weber Programme is a structured programme combining research and training, which makes it a unique experience in post-doctoral education in the social sciences. Being unique, it needed to be a 'learning experience', as I said in my first welcome in 2006, and indeed the programme has always built on its previous experience. For example, every year, at the end of the Max Weber Programme activities, we have a workshop where we take stock of these activities. Some of them are group activities (we call them Academic Practice Groups) others are common MWP activities or activities linked to the departments; the reports and feedback from the Max Weber Fellows help us to adapt and improve the programme.

This year too we had our assessment workshop. Obviously, after six years there are some comments that are not new, but a comment from the report of a very active group struck me: foremost the Max Weber Programme experience had been a peer review experience. I think it captures the spirit of what is, or what should be, the Max Weber Programme.

In research we are used to peer review as a way to filter and improve published articles, which usually takes the form of anonymous referee reports. But this is limited in scope and impact and it is often perceived as 'one more exam to pass.' Peer review should be considered in a broader and more basic and constructive sense; as the continuous interactions with colleagues – and, in this case, Fellows – regarding all the different aspects of our work and interests, our research, teaching, presentations, writing, etc. It is within this interaction that we sharpen our ideas and objectives, our methods and results, our communication and rhetoric. It is precisely by finding the right balance between individual work and thought and iterative talk and criticism that scholars, scientists and artists are forged. This was true in Renaissance Florence, and it is true now in the EUI campus at San Domenico.

Throughout our education we often experience some forms of interactive peer review, with friends giving a helping hand. But, first, professors often take the leading critical role, which is difficult to disentangle from their screening role; second, we often gather in a too self-referential, self-gratifying circle; third, we hardly have time to pay attention to how we actually peer-review each other. These shortcomings are also often true when we start our academic career surrounded by more senior colleagues who may have a say in our promotion, where we follow our specialized path within self-referential circles, where we are too busy to think about the how.

It is precisely in its potential for peer-review practice that the Max Weber Programme is unique. First, and foremost, because in contrast with most post-doctoral Fellowships, Fellows are not isolated in an office to write articles or a book, or simply integrated in a research group to follow someone else's (self-referential) agenda. In the MWP Fellows are part of a fairly large, diverse (culturally, academically, disciplinary) group (49 in 2011–2012), with free interaction with other Fellows, at a very similar stage in their academic career, from the same or other disciplines within the social sciences. As most former Max Weber Fellows have recognized, they have got the most from the day-to-day interaction in Villa La Fonte and elsewhere with other Fellows who often have become friends for life.

Second, the programme is structured to enhance such peer-review interaction by facilitating multidisciplinary understanding, with the different Multidisciplinary Research Activities, and focusing on the different aspects of academic careers, with the different Academic Practice Activities (presentation and job market, teaching and assessment, publishing and writing, etc.) It is often these activities that turn day-to-day discussions about which is the best ice-cream place in town, into research and academic career discussions, or that stimulate Fellows to gather to hear, and criticize, the presentation of a Fellow who is giving a job talk.

Third, the Academic Practice Activities, and subsequent discussions, can also help to reflect on the how: on how to get rid of standard prejudices across fields and disciplines, or across cultures, on how to be very critical, to be constructive, without losing – instead, reinforcing – trust.

Last, but not least, the programme also gives plenty of time, and excellent EUI facilities, to concentrate on individual work; to learn more about how to balance periods of isolation with periods of interaction. Of course, in this balance no two Fellows are alike, but the experience of these six years of the Max Weber Programme makes me think that former Fellows are right when they say that one gets the most out of the Max Weber Programme experience in the day-to-day interaction among Fellows or, as one of this year's Fellows said, from the peer review experience.

Finally, as in previous years, my sincere gratitude goes to all the people who have collaborated and participated in this year's programme. From the external collaborators who have come to Florence or have hosted our Max Weber Fellows in their institutions, to the EUI faculty and visitors who have actively participated in the programme activities or who have mentored MWFs; from the dedicated staff of the MWP (and of the EUI actively supporting the MWP) to, of course, this year's Max Weber Fellows, this report is just a small reflection of what they have done, and they will do (and this year we did better in the Copa Pavone!).

MAX WEBER PROGRAMME

ACTIVITIES 2011-2012

The activities of the Max Weber Programme are concentrated around two core themes: Academic Practice and Multidisciplinary Research. Over the six years of the Programme, the objectives of the activities have become more structured and focused. An important lesson has been that the practice skills are best learned when working with individuals and thus a strong focus on tutorials and individual feedback based on different needs is now a central part of the Programme. The research activities, on the other hand, demand a multidisciplinary focus and a strong level of participation from as many Fellows as possible to reach their aim of enhancing and fostering multidisciplinary understanding.

ACADEMIC PRACTICE ACTIVITIES

Based on the experience gained in the first few years, the Academic Practice activities programme is organized into three Modules: 1. Job Market 2. Publishing and Writing and 3. Teaching. The modules overlap in time to allow for continuity and follow-up sessions on activities within the discipline groups (Academic Practice Groups) and the Academic Communication Skills support, offered within the programme throughout the academic year.

JOB MARKET MODULE

The Max Weber Programme actively supports Fellows seeking an academic position. First, in addition to the workshops in which Fellows discuss and develop their CVs, cover letters, bio-sketches and web pages, they also share information and discuss job market strategies in their fields. Second, Fellows receive professional feedback on their presentation and interviewing skills. Mock interviews are filmed and assessed by professionals and provide Fellows with the opportunity for further individual self-assessment on interview techniques.

Adrien Delmas, Eva Garcia-Moran
& Stefan Malthaner, Max Weber Fellows

An increasingly vital part of the job market is self presentation on the internet. To assist the Fellows in presenting themselves and their research in the best possible way, the MWP offers all Fellows the opportunity to construct their own website. A special CMS system has been set up which is very easy for Fellows to use, and offers a space where they can upload their publications, their research agendas and their teaching experience and present themselves in a professional manner (<http://www.mwpweb.eu/>). Max Weber Fellows can take their personal websites to their new academic institutions when their Fellowship comes to an end.

The MWP is also a platform for obtaining information about, and reflecting on, the current state of the academic job market. In particular, the Academic Careers Observatory (ACO) offers a unique resource for researchers looking for a job in academia and, in general, for people interested in the international comparison of academic careers (see below).

The Max Weber Programme proves to be very successful in the placement of its Fellows in the academic job market; of the 2011-2012 Max Weber Fellows all but three Fellows moved on to an academic position following their Max Weber Fellowship.

PUBLISHING AND WRITING MODULE

The MWP considers writing and publishing a core element of academic advancement. Two sets of activities are carried out to support the Fellows in this area; the workshops organized by the Programme and the writing activities offered by the EUI Language Centre/FIESOLE Group. The activities are designed not only to assist non-native Fellows in fine-tuning their English language skills but also to support the writing process for all members of the Programme and for them to excel in English academic writing. The activities are organized into three components: i) an academic writing course, offered in the First Term, and ii) individual tutorials and iii) disciplinary writers' groups, the latter two continuing throughout the year. The EUI Language Unit and the Max Weber Programme also offer the Fellows an extensive correction service. English language correction is offered to all Fellows for their publications and working papers. Several Fellows also use the correction service for their Power Point slides, CVs and cover letters.

TEACHING MODULE

The Max Weber Programme aims to improve and develop standards of excellence in Fellows' teaching skills.

Actual teaching by Fellows is not a MWP requirement but taking into account that Fellows arrive with differing teaching experience, and that teaching methods differ across fields and university systems, the MWP offers different options for gaining practical teaching experience. This supports Fellows in their search for an academic position. It is the strategy of the Max Weber Programme to offer opportunities not only outside the EUI (where undergraduate teaching is possible) but also within the EUI. This year, for the first time, the Max Weber Programme formalized the participation of Fellows in the Teaching Module by giving a Teacher Training Certificate to those Fellows who completed the module. Twenty-nine Fellows received the MWP Teacher Training Certificate on 20 June 2012.

Within the EUI, where mainly research-oriented seminars, master classes and workshops are 'taught', there is widespread opportunity to gain teaching experience at a high post-graduate level. Post-graduate teaching, tutoring and advising Ph.D. researchers, as well as co-organising seminars and workshops, are activities very much appreciated by Max Weber Fellows. Fellows are also put in charge of organizing some of the summer schools for European M.A. students in the Social Sciences. The intended status of Max Weber Fellows as junior faculty is a core strategy of the Max Weber Programme. Departments hold Fellows' Seminars on a regular basis. Considering the standards of excellence of the Max Weber Programme, and the highly selective appointment of its Fellows, a systematic collaboration between EUI Professors and the MWP post-doctoral Fellows promotes the European and global academic reputation of all Departments and the appeal of the EUI as a whole.

Local Universities: Over these six years, the MWP has expanded its network of collaboration with local universities and has established links with many of the Florence-based American campuses, and Italian Universities offering undergraduate or M.A. level courses. Among these are James Madison University, Gonzaga University, New York University at La Pietra, FIT/Polimoda and IMT Lucca. Max Weber Fellows are offered teaching and/or lecturing opportunities at several of these universities. The M.A. in European Union Policy Studies offered by James Madison University in Florence, for example, guarantees priority in the selection process to Max Weber Fellows with competences in line with James Madison University's teaching needs. Courses can also be team-taught. Fellows are requested to use state-of-the-art, interactive teaching methods and are constantly monitored and supervised, in order to improve their performance. Grading methods and tutoring of papers as well as assessment skills are developed in conjunction with the academic coordinator. Fellows receive professional feedback on their performance and an overall written evaluation of their teaching skills by the end of each course. For an overview see:

UPF Teaching Exchange (see below for details)

LSE Teaching Exchange (see below for details)

Humboldt Teaching Exchange (see below for details)

Teaching Abroad: In 2008, the Max Weber Programme set up a ‘teaching abroad’ programme with the London School of Economics in which Max Weber Fellows were offered the possibility of one week’s teaching experience. In May 2008 five Fellows visited the LSE where they each gave a public lecture and a seminar and received professional feedback on their performance from Nick Byrne, Director, and Neil McLean, Professor, at the LSE Teaching and Learning Centre. In addition, the Fellows had meetings with LSE faculty members in their fields. Based on the success of this experience the Max Weber Programme continued the development of this exchange and in 2009 a selected group of sixteen Fellows had the opportunity to go either to the LSE in London or to Humboldt University in Berlin, for intensive teaching training practice for a week. For the academic year 2009-2010 an agreement was made between the EUI-MWP and the University of Pompeu Fabra, Barcelona, to set up a teaching exchange for a maximum of another eight Max Weber Fellows. As in 2010-2011, in the academic year 2011-2012 a total of twenty-six Max Weber Fellows participated in a teaching exchange.

On the LSE Exchange

The exchange was set up by the Max Weber Programme and the LSE Teaching and Learning Centre. The Fellows all gave a public lecture and a seminar and received professional feedback on their performance from Nick Byrne, Director, and Neil McLean, Professor, at the LSE Teaching and Learning Centre for Academic and Professional Development. In addition the Fellows had lunch meetings with LSE faculty members in their fields and had an exchange meeting with LSE Fellows at a similar stage in their academic careers.

Twelve Max Weber Fellows were at the LSE from 27 February to 2 March: Birgit Apitzsch (SPS), Elisabetta Bini (HEC), Adrien Delmas (HEC), Ignacio De La Rasilla Del Moral (LAW), Yarine Fawaz (ECO), Ines Levin (SPS), Luana Joppert Swensson (LAW), Sheila Neder Cerezetti (LAW), Alex Street (SPS), Michio Umeda (SPS) and Justin Valasek (ECO)

Agustín Cassas, Max Weber Fellow

Some impressions of the LSE exchange:

Birgit Apitzsch (SPS)

It was extremely useful to discuss the lesson plan with the teaching trainer, and to learn more about the groups of students who were to be taught. It was good to have sufficient time to adjust the lesson plan after the initial feedback, and also after the feedback which was given following the first class. The repetition of the lesson and the very detailed and constructive feedback – by both professionals and by students – were extremely helpful; the second lesson went much better than the first one.

Justin Valasek (ECO)

The teaching exchange was by far the most useful training in pedagogy I've ever participated in. I particularly appreciated the structure, which allowed us to get the theory from Neil and then immediately apply that knowledge to a setting with actual students. Repeating the same class was also incredibly helpful as it allowed us to quickly incorporate the feedback and see how much it improved the experience. Neil's seminars were incredibly helpful, giving concrete examples of how to incorporate different teaching techniques.

Marta Simoncini (LAW)

The teaching week at the LSE has been really useful for developing teaching skills. I think the professors of the LSE Language Centre gave us a lot of positive input and feedback about what teaching means and how students can be involved in your own work. In particular, I appreciated very much the sessions by Neil McLean about teaching methods and communication strategies. The task to observe a lecture was useful, because generally as a "student" I usually consider and listen to the content of lectures, but I don't pay attention to how a lesson is delivered. On the contrary, the way things are communicated can affect the same capability in understanding of your audience.

On the UPF Exchange

The UPF-MWP, Barcelona teaching exchange took place from 16 to 20 April 2012, and was set up in collaboration with the Vice-Chancellor of UPF, Maria Morras, the Dean of the Faculty of Humanities, Mireia Trench, and the coordinator of the MWP exchange at UPF, Pau Solà. All Fellows taught a couple of sessions within the undergraduate courses and each gave a talk on a topic related to their research. They were also in contact with M.A. and Ph.D. students and professors from the respective Faculties and Departments hosting their teaching. Seven Fellows went out to UPF: Augustin Casas (ECO), Daniel Hershenzon (HEC), Jonathan Garry James (ECO), Lei Ji (ECO), Henry Mak (ECO) Stefan Malthaner (SPS) and Mihai Varga (SPS)

Some impressions of the UPF exchange:

Henry Mak (ECO)

Overall, I had a very productive week at UPF. I was assigned an academic tutor, Rosa Ferrer, before my visit to UPF. Rosa arranged various academic activities for me before I arrived. She also introduced me to the department on the first day of my visit. I gave a 90-minute lecture to more than 200 undergraduates at UPF, having received teaching materials from the course instructor before I arrived. I also met with the instructor before I taught the class. My academic tutor audited the first 30 minutes of my lecture and she gave me very useful feedback after the lecture. Besides teaching, I also audited two post-graduate level economic classes in my research field and I had individual meetings with five professors working in my research field. Each meeting lasted for about 30 minutes. I also attended three research seminars at UPF.

Stefan Malthaner (SPS)

Overall, the teaching exchange at UPF Barcelona was a very pleasant and highly enriching experience in terms of teaching, as well as with respect to academic discussion and contacts with academic colleagues. In my case, the main element of the exchange was a full-day teaching workshop, in which I gave a lecture and received detailed comments and advice from my mentor, Mario Diani, and other colleagues. The overall organization of the exchange was very friendly and pleasant, with members of the teaching faculty and professors welcoming us with a little reception (and a presentation on the university) and offering many opportunities for individual meetings and conversations.

On the Humboldt exchange

Seven Max Weber Fellows went to Humboldt University for a 10 day teaching practice visit, which was set up by agreement between the Max Weber Programme and the English Department of the Language Centre, Humboldt University, Berlin. The exchange took place from 21 to 25 May 2012. The Fellows who went to Humboldt were: Chris Colvin (HEC), Daniela Comande (LAW), Eva Garcia-Moran (ECO), Emanuela Grama-Neamtu (HEC), Daniel Lee (HEC), Lauri Tahtinen (HEC) and Leen Vandecasteele (SPS).

The module had three components:

- Class observation (prior to teaching): MWP Fellows observed the group to whom they would be giving a tutorial during a language class (English for Specific Purposes). The colleague teaching the class afterwards discussed all technical and other details of the tutorial to be taught by the Fellow.
- Tutorial: three convenors observed the tutorial and gave feedback to the Fellow. The students filled out feedback forms which could be discussed in the feedback session. The tutorial and the feedback session were open to other Fellows.
- Lecture: MWP Fellows gave an open undergraduate lecture in their own discipline. The convenors attended the lecture and there was a feedback session. The lecture and the feedback session were open to other Fellows.

The Humboldt staff responsible for the organisation of the module were Connie Hacke and David Bowskill.

Some impressions of the Humboldt exchange:

Chris Colvin (HEC)

The exchange was very well run. We had activities scheduled for every day of the week. Sufficient free time was scheduled for us to work on our individual lesson plans and prepare our teaching. The sessions with Neal were of a very high quality. And we were given the opportunity to implement what we had learnt immediately in the classroom. The mixture of theory and practice is in my opinion a much superior way to learn how to be a good teacher. I am glad I signed up for the Humboldt exchange, and would like to specifically thank Connie for organising it so well, including the welcome drinks and meal on the Friday.

Lauri Tahtinen (HEC)

The Humboldt Teaching Exchange was probably the single most productive activity of all Max Weber Programme activities. The onsite organisation was pitch-perfect, largely thanks to Cornelia Hacke. Neil's sessions were very useful because they were integrated into a week dedicated to teaching with the immediate opportunity to put into practice some of his suggestions. The Humboldt (and LSE) model of teaching the same material twice, but to two different groups, in one week worked very well. It allowed one to truly reflect on the plentiful feedback, readjust one's expectations, as well as to simply improve on one's own performance. My own experience was that the second session was, indeed, stronger and this was reflected in the feedback that I received. Also, I think it is important to maintain the role of the individual teacher – rather than resort to pair-teaching – as we will be doing the vast majority of our teaching alone. Part of learning to be a teacher is to understand that you are in charge of the classroom and cannot rely on anyone else to save you.

Leen Vandecasteele (SPS)

For me, the teaching exchange has been one of the best experiences in the Max Weber Programme. I thoroughly enjoyed the chance to receive feedback on my teaching. The best aspects of this exchange were: 1. The introductory lecture by Neil, which provided us with practical and hands-on experience. This made me more confident in front of the class. 2. The freedom we enjoyed to teach alone in one of our specific topics of interest. 3. The chance to teach the same lecture twice to a similar group. The feedback gained in between the sessions was invaluable in reshaping the class.

ACADEMIC PRACTICE GROUPS

The discipline-bound Academic Practice Groups were initiated in the second year of the Max Weber Programme. The Practice Groups complement the Practice Workshops and serve as follow-up or preparatory sessions for the existing workshops. Additional topics and themes are also discussed in the groups. The Practice Groups allow for more discussion and in-depth exchange of ideas and experience within the disciplines. It is the Fellows' experience that the groups help establish very close working and personal ties.

ECO FELLOWS PRACTICE GROUP

The representative and coordinator of the MWP ECO Fellows 2011-2012 was Justin Valasek.

The Academic Practices Group (APG) sessions would consist of a meeting of the ECO Fellows, which was often followed by a general session of all disciplines. For each session, one Fellow was assigned as chair. The chair would prepare discussion questions and circulated them beforehand to both the faculty participant and the ECO Fellows.

The sessions took the following form: we would begin with a presentation of the faculty member's views and advice on the particular topic, and then follow the presentation with a general discussion. This format allowed us to benefit from the expertise of the faculty participant and also to draw from the collective knowledge of the group. Following the meeting, a written report summarizing the main points of the APG was drafted by the ECO representative and circulated among the group.

Below we list a brief summary of the topics covered and list, respectively, the faculty participant and the Fellow chairing the APG:

Job Market (Ramon Marimon/Jenny Simon)

This session focused on the academic job market in economics. We analysed the job market from the perspectives of both applicants and department search committees. We focused on generating a consensus view on "best practices" for approaching the job market.

Publishing (Fernando Vega-Redondo/Agustin Casas)

In this session, we discussed not only how to get our work published, but also how to provide constructive feedback in referee reports.

Funding (Ramon Marimon/Yarine Fawaz)

Funding sources differ depending on the nation in question, but we discussed the main sources for funding

SOME OF THE TOPICS DISCUSSED WITHIN THE ACADEMIC PRACTICE GROUPS 2011-2012 AND AS A COLLECTIVE WERE:

Comparing different Ph.D. experiences. Assessing the effectiveness of different graduate programmes or models.

Publishing and refereeing: a) improving our understanding, main journals (publishers) in your field/discipline; b) effective use of citation indexes; c) strengths and weaknesses of current peer-review practices and the ethics of peer-reviewing; d) designing your publishing and refereeing strategy; e) writing a book proposal, etc.

Developing new course curricula. Best experiences or practices in teaching.

Ethical issues on sharing knowledge and ideas; being a mentor, and copyright.

Making a research proposal and strategies for getting funding.

Discussing, 'Code of Good Practice in Academic Research'.

Contributing to the development of academia, within your university, your professional associations, networks.

Fellows at the ECO panel at the June Conference 2012

in Europe and the US, and at which point in our research we should apply for funding.

Ethics (Ramon Marimon/Tomás Rodríguez-Barraquer)

In this session we covered ethical issues that arise in an academic setting. Topics included student-teacher interaction, publishing and relationships with co-authors.

Mentoring (Evi Pappa/Justin Valasek)

An important part of an academic career involves mentoring relationships with both undergraduate and graduate students. We discussed the appropriate level of involvement with our mentees and summarized the main responsibilities of the mentor.

HEC FELLOWS PRACTICE GROUP

The representative and coordinator of the HEC Fellows 2011-2012 was Daniel Lee. Overall, the historians benefitted considerably from the various APGs held throughout the year. While we are all individually grateful to our respective mentors for their support and generosity, we are collectively grateful to Professor Steve Smith, whose enthusiasm and encouragement went far beyond his expected duties. In particular, we gained a great deal from Professor Smith's experience during the Publishing Strategies APG in which we discussed the necessary factors to consider prior to submitting written work to a journal or publishing house. We were also fortunate to enjoy Professor Smith's useful comments on our individual syllabi during our course design workshop. This was a valuable session in which we considered the various ways of putting together courses and in which we discussed topics ranging from students' expectations to setting suitable reading material for undergraduates.

The research funding APG allowed us to consider the various possibilities to secure additional work-related grants or post-doctoral Fellowships. By drawing on one another's experience with funding applications, we were able to put together a report which covered six continents. This looked at publicly funded institutions (such as the CNRS in France, the British Academy and the Academy of Finland), and also private organisations and charities, many of which are often subject specific (these include the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum and the Getty). In the same vein, our practice group on Job Search Strategies drew entirely on our own personal and professional experience.

Our filmed micro-teaching session was a useful way of comparing teaching styles and techniques. Because this APG was in the second term, we were already familiar with each other's work and research interests. Thus delivery and teaching presentation rather than content were the elements which fell under scrutiny. The fact that the sessions were filmed proved useful, for it provided the opportunity to go back and explore colleagues' teaching styles.

Our job interview practice sessions proved to be highly important, especially during the months of January and February, when most search committees had drawn up short lists. These sessions were largely inspired by the mock interviews in the first term with Professors Burke, Smith and Molà. Upon receipt of an invitation Fellows would organise a series of mock interviews at Villa la Fonte. Here, they presented their research and answered questions as though in a genuine job interview. Fellows would receive critical feedback and useful tips from colleagues before repeating the exercise from scratch.

As a group we consistently benefited from reading each other's work. This took the form of pre-circulating written applications and potential journal articles. Over the course of an evening, one or possibly two Fellows would have the opportunity to take centre stage and to receive well-developed feedback from their peers. By rule, these took place in a social and convivial setting outside of the Villa, to foster a more relaxed ambience.

LAW FELLOWS PRACTICE GROUP

The Law Academic Practice Group for the year 2011-2012 was coordinated by Daniela Comandè, who also represented the twelve Law Fellows. Ignacio De La Rosilla del Moral, Karin Maria De Vries, and Marta Simoncini acted as Reporters for specific issues.

In addition to the three classical modules of the APG (Publishing and Writing, Teaching and the Job Market), from the start the group discussed the organization of a common multidisciplinary research workshop, the 'Classics Revisited' Conference on Polanyi, and other activities and issues. The group formally started work on 22 November 2011, when the Law Fellows met with Professors Scheinin and Francioni from the Law Department to discuss 'Publishing Strategies' and 'Research Funding' opportunities. In addition, Professor Patterson organised a very useful Law seminar on this issue, focusing on the main successful strategies involved in writing and publishing a scholarly article/book. With regard to Research Funding, various possible sources of funding were discussed. The Fellows were encouraged to talk to peers and more advanced colleagues in order to carve out suitable topics. One piece of advice was to focus initially on sources of 'purely academic' funding, for example from national research councils. Applications to more policy oriented sources, such as the Framework Programmes of the European Commission, usually require more experience.

In addition to these classic APG topics, Fellows discussed the 'Teaching' module experience. The module provided by the Max Weber Programme has been useful for developing teaching skills and techniques by focusing on students' needs and the learning process when giving a course. The teaching exchange was a really great experience. We received a lot of input and feedback about what teaching means and how to engage students. Regarding the 'Job market' topic we started talking about the importance of the activities related to the development of those skills necessary to find a job. Regarding more strictly the Job Market we tried to sum up the different experiences through a questionnaire, and the result was presented during the common meeting on the 20 June. The Law questionnaire showed that, on average, Fellows submitted application materials for between 10 and 15 positions, of which the greatest percentage (50%-75%) involved both research and teaching duties. This noted, at least 25% of them answered that they had also addressed submission materials to the non-academic private law sector. Although it should be kept in mind that research-only positions do not generally involve personal interviews, Law Fellows were, on average, short-listed for less than 5 job interviews. It is also worthwhile highlighting that more than 75% of job-market applications were addressed to seek employment in EU Member States, Fellows found the Northern European job-market more welcoming to their pursuits.

During the 'Ethics' APG several topics were discussed relating to academic integrity and ethical conduct. One of these concerned the use of (statistical) data. In this respect, one particularity of law as a discipline is that typically legal sources, such as legislation and case law, are generally publicly available.

Lawyers also organised their own 'Research workshops' on Rights, Regulation and Governance. All the Law Fellows were very happy with the organisation of the workshop and we were pleased with its findings, which involved a great number of Fellows from all the disciplines.

SPS FELLOWS PRACTICE GROUP

Stefan Malthaner and Leen Vandecasteele were the Representatives and Coordinators of the SPS Max Weber Fellows 2011-2012. With fifteen Fellows this was the largest APG.

'Formal' meetings and discussions:

During the 2011-2012 MWP year, the SPS Fellows Group organized six formal meetings to choose their representatives and to discuss several topics suggested by the programme director, several of them with the participation of EUI faculty. The meetings and their topical focus in detail were:

17 October: first formal meeting to discuss forms and topics of the SPS-APG's activities and to choose their representatives.

22 November: meeting on publishing strategies with Donatella della Porta and Christian Reus-Smit. As editors of important journals and book series, the participating professors were able to give general as well as specific advice on how to publish books as well as journal articles.

29 November: meeting on research funding, with a focus on programmes for young scientists; Lorenzo Bosi, a former Marie Curie Fellow at the EUI participated in this discussion and provided details on the application process and selection criteria of the Marie Curie Programme.

14 February: SPS Fellows meeting on job search strategies. Fellows exchanged experiences and gave advice on how to apply, how to prepare for job talks, and particularities of job markets in certain countries.

27 March: meeting on mentoring and supervising with Adrienne Heritier and Martin Kohli, covering relationships with undergraduate and graduate students as well as supervising Ph.D. students.

19 June: Discussion of Fellows' experiences on the job market.

'Informal' Meetings, practice job talks, and other activities

In addition to these more 'formal' meetings with and without faculty, the SPS Fellows Group met more informally (dinner at the pizzeria in San Domenico) to socialize and discuss matters such as current projects, publications, job-applications, etc. Moreover, several Fellows organized a number of practice job talks within the SPS group and met in small groups to comment on articles or discuss teaching formats and requirements in particular countries.

Evaluation of the meetings

Attendance at the meetings was good; most meetings were attended by a majority of the SPS Fellows (around 10 on average). In their comments at the end of the year, SPS Fellows emphasized that they found meetings with EUI faculty to be extremely helpful. In addition, they emphasized the benefits of informal discussions about, for example, job search strategies or teaching experiences. Also, practice job talks with other Fellows were considered to be very useful.

Other representatives' issues

In November 2011, the representatives were in touch with faculty at the SPS department to communicate the Fellows position in the discussion of a second Max Weber year, and the selection procedure and criteria.

MULTIDISCIPLINARY RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

In addition to the Academic Practice activities, a second set of activities is a core part of the Programme. The Multidisciplinary Research activities are designed to improve the Max Weber Fellows' understanding of the four disciplines, with the aim of enhancing interdisciplinarity and fostering a greater understanding of research and research careers in the Social Sciences, both in Europe and in the United States.

MAX WEBER LECTURES

The monthly Max Weber Lectures are delivered by distinguished scholars representing the four disciplines of the Programme (Economics, History, Law and Political and Social Sciences). The Programme aims to invite scholars with a special interdisciplinary focus that will be of broad academic interest to all members of the academic community both within and beyond the EUI. The lectures always take place at 5 pm and are followed by a reception.

The 2011-2012 Max Weber Lectures were given by:

Chris Pissarides, Professor of Economics at the LSE, and holder of the Norman Sosnow Chair in Economics. He specialises in the economics of unemployment, labour-market theory, labour-market policy and more recently he has written about growth and structural change. His book Equilibrium Unemployment Theory is a standard reference on the economics of unemployment. In 2010 he was awarded the Nobel Prize for Economics. Pissarides' lecture took place at Villa la Fonte on 19 October 2011 and was titled, 'Employment in Europe'.

Pierre Rosanvallon, Director of Studies at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales and professor at the Dixit's lecture took place at Villa la Fonte on 14 December 2011 and was titled, 'Governance, Development and Foreign Direct Investment'.

Kathleen Thelen, Ford Professor of Political Science at MIT and Permanent External Scientific Member of the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies. She studies the origins, development, and effects of institutional arrangements that define distinctive "varieties of capitalism" across the developed democracies, and is the author of How Institutions Evolve: The Political Economy of Skills in Germany, Britain, the United States and Japan. Thelen's lecture took place at Villa la Fonte on 18 January 2012 and was titled, 'Varieties of Capitalism: Trajectories of Liberalization and the New Politics of Social Solidarity'.

biography, law, history and literature. Among other books, she is the author of A life of H.L.A. Hart: The nightmare and the noble dream. Lacey's lecture took place at Villa la Fonte on 15 February 2012 and was titled, 'Revisiting the Comparative Political Economy of Punishment'.

Stephan Leibfried, Professor of Comparative and European Welfare State Politics at the University of Bremen. His research centres on comparative studies of the development of the welfare state in Germany, the U.S. and the U.K. focusing on the changing interface between international and domestic politics, and the effects of European integration on national welfare states. Leibfried's lecture took place at Villa la Fonte on 21 March 2012 and was titled, 'Ships of State: Germany, Europe and Beyond. Images of Political Unity for Troubled Times'.

Linda Colley, Professor of History at Princeton University and an expert on Britain since 1700. She favours cross-disciplinary history, and in both her writing and her teaching she examines Britain's past in a broader European, imperial, and global context. She is the author of Britons: Forging the Nation 1707-1837, and the more recent The Ordeal of Elizabeth Marsh: A Woman in World law. Revesz's lecture took place at Villa la Fonte on 20 June 2012 and was titled, 'Three stages in the Evolution of Cost-Benefit Analysis as a Tool to Evaluate Regulation'.

All lectures are eventually published in the Max Weber Lecture Series and are available as pdf files from the EUI publications database CADMUS <http://cadmus.eui.eu/dspace/index.jsp>. The Max Weber lectures are also filmed and can be viewed on:

CONFERENCES

The Max Weber Programme holds at least three major conferences over the academic year.

Thanks to the enhancement of discussions between Fellows on our intranet Moodle platform, the Fellows' initiatives in organizing conferences on interdisciplinary research topics of mutual interest grew in 2011-2012.

In 2011-2012 the Max Weber Programme organised the following conferences:

6th MWP-ACO Conference.

Funding Opportunities in the Social Sciences in the European Research Area: Providers, Users and Professional Associations

30 November 2011,

Academic Careers Observatory, MWP, EUI

The conference gathered together academics, policymakers and representatives of European and national funding agencies to discuss how to enhance the efficiency of different national and supra-national research funding schemes.

The conference involved the presentation and discussion of the findings of the 'Survey on Research Funding for the Social Sciences in Europe', which was conducted by the ACO in 2011. Proceedings opened with the presentation of the 'Results of the Survey on Research Funding in the Social Sciences and Humanities in Europe', jointly organized by the MWP-ACO with the European Economic Association (EEA), the European Sociological Association (ESA) and the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR). Representatives of the three professional associations were present, and they actively participated in the debate on how to improve the efficiency of European institutions providing research funding. The survey neatly showed that despite notable improvements, both national and supranational financing sources display several problems. Despite the heterogeneity on how different national agencies are managed and very different assessments on behalf of the users, there is widespread distrust in the evaluation process, which is deemed to be insufficiently transparent.

European-level agencies were treated separately and they also displayed a different set of problems. The Framework Programme (FP) is burdened by cumbersome procedures and high logistical costs, which are often seen as insurmountable obstacles. Successful candidates perceive the inflexibility of FP schemes as a problem. The European Research Council (ERC) has instead very low success rates, which discourage potential candidates from applying. Finally, economists, sociologists and political scientists agree on the most desirable features of research funding: flexibility, adequate funding, competent and transparent evaluation and the simplification of the application process.

The presentations on specific national and supranational European funding opportunities for young researchers delved deeper into the various application processes, focussing on success rates and evaluation procedures. One of the main themes that emerged during the conference was the way research proposals are evaluated. By limiting the pool of applicants only to those who have, for example, already been published in the top journals in their field, which is a common feature of the evaluation process in many of the national and supranational agencies, funding opportunities are often closed to a large section of potential researchers. This issue was discussed and related with the overall question of how representative the data obtained through the survey was, given that it employs similar sampling criteria.

The lack of an impact assessment of the research conducted in Europe emerged as the greatest deficit of many funding agencies. While there is a considerable amount of research financed by national and supranational institutions, there remains an open question over its final impact: what is this research used for and what does it tangibly produce? An ex-post evaluation system is required for many of these schemes in order to provide feedback, which may be then used to improve the evaluation process, both with respect to the CVs and proposed projects of the applicants.

*The Embeddedness of Markets today:
Returning to Polanyi to rethink Development, Markets and Financial Crisis.
6th Classics Revisited MWP Conference
2 May 2012, MWP, EUI*

In the context of the extended economic crisis in western capitalism that has crowned two decades of economic growth with worsening income inequality, Karl Polanyi's work has gained new prominence.

This conference sought to bring together Max Weber Fellows, EUI faculty, and Ph.D. researchers with leading scholars from around the world in order to critically assess the work of Polanyi and its economic, political, and normative dimensions in the context of contemporary capitalism and its current crisis.

The speakers assessed Polanyi's historical account of the transition to capitalism, relying on his contributions to reflect on contemporary issues of capitalist development, and theorise about struggles of emancipation that complement his framework. The speakers' multi-disciplinary origins in law, political science, history and political theory provided for a lively critical discussion of Polanyi's framework and helped us to understand its contemporary relevance.

5th MWP -JMU Graduate Symposium: European Policies after the Lisbon Treaty
6 June 2012, MWP, EUI

The symposium aimed to establish a platform for JMU M.A. students to present their work and ideas about the EU in the professional setting of an academic conference. The papers discussed the various policies adopted by the European Union, with an eye toward scrutinizing their effectiveness and analysing their impact. Overall, they sought to promote better understanding of the ever-evolving EU system of governance.

As two institutions promoting academic excellence, the EUI and JMU granted an award for the best paper produced for the conference. The award went to Chelsea Richter, who also worked as an intern for the MWP Academic Careers Observatory.

The Symposium concluded with a keynote speech by Professor Chris Reus-Smit, SPS Department, EUI, titled, 'The Nature and Importance of Special Responsibilities in World Politics'

*6th Max Weber Programme
June Fellows Conference:
Social Issues for Social Sciences*
13-14 June 2012, MWP, EUI

The 2012 June conference of the Max Weber Programme gave an overview of the on-going research of the 2011-2012 Max Weber Fellows. The conference provided a perspective of the current Max Weber Fellows' contributions to the Social Sciences and Humanities. It also acted as a forum to foster cross-disciplinary and inter-cohort academic collaboration, and to enhance the latter a select group of former Max Weber Fellows was invited back to Villa la Fonte as discussants.

The Conference was organized by a representative of each discipline-group; Lei Ji (ECO), Emanuela Grama-Neamtu (HEC), Leonardo Giani (LAW), and Inés Levin (SPS) in collaboration with the MWP Director Ramon Marimon and the MWP Academic Coordinator Karin Tilmans.

MULTIDISCIPLINARY RESEARCH WORKSHOPS

The Multidisciplinary Research Workshops are based on input from an invited outside speaker, Fellow or EUI faculty member. They are organized by the MWP, following up on suggestions from Fellows, other recommendations, and the Max Weber Fellows themselves. The aim is to enhance multidisciplinary understanding among the disciplines of the Programme.

The Multidisciplinary Research Workshops 2011-2012

12 October 2011

'In the Aftermath of the Arab Spring'

Oliver Roy, RSCAS and SPS Department, EUI, and Virginie Collombier, MWF

The workshop consisted in a series of short presentations: Daniel Ritter, 'The Divergent Paths of the Arab Spring: Nonviolent Revolutions or Civil War(s)?'

Virginie Collombier, 'After the revolution, how to build a new political order?'

Georges Fahmi, 'Religious actors and democratic transition in Egypt'

Tina Freyburg, 'An evaluation of the EU democratization support in the Arab world'

Delphine Perrin, 'The multifaceted impact of Arab Chaos on Migration routes and policies: current and expected shifts'

Prof. Olivier Roy, concluding remarks

The presentations were followed by a general discussion, led by Prof. Roy and Virginie Collombier.

9 November 2011

'Protecting Intellectual Property Rights or Creativity?'

David Levine, ECO Department, EUI

In a panel discussion with Professor David Levine, co-author of the influential book Against Intellectual Monopoly (Cambridge, 2008), this workshop addressed the problems of today's intellectual property rights regime and what its future may hold. The discussion, modelled as a Parliamentary Select Committee hearing, is also part of the EUI's Global Governance Programme. Panel members from across the Max Weber Programme's four disciplines questioned Professor Levine's justifications for reform. Particular attention was given to the role of intellectual property in today's digital age.

'2011, a Year of Euro Crisis in Perspective'

Ramon Marimon, MWP, EUI, and Nathan Marcus, MWF

The euro-zone's financial crisis dominated the headlines in 2011. Initially a sovereign-debt crisis limited to certain euro-zone countries with growing budget deficits and high levels of sovereign debt, it gradually evolved into a general crisis of confidence in the entire euro-zone. Euro-zone leaders are currently grappling with solutions to restore confidence in order to prevent the collapse of the European Monetary Union, but the possible solutions, from the European Financial Stability Facility to creating Euro-Bonds and a fiscal union are highly contentious.

Will the euro and Europe's monetary union survive? The workshop debated these issues.

Unveiling Colonialism in the Republic organized by Inés Valdez and Daniel Lee, Max Weber Fellows

In France, the controversy surrounding the veil and the full veil is now entering its third decade. After Belgium, France became the second country to ban the wearing of the burqa in public spaces.

It is likely that this measure, which came into effect in August 2011, will be contested in European-level courts over the coming months and years. Other European countries such as The Netherlands and Germany are currently discussing, or have considered implementing, similar measures in the past.

The workshop examined the contemporary controversy around the veil from a historical perspective. The four disciplines of the Max Weber Programme provided a privileged lens through which to tackle a complex issue that brought together questions of religion, racial difference, partisan politics and immigration, allowing us to examine the intersection between historical legacies and the current controversy.

Thus the workshop illuminated the tensions and blind spots currently present in public discourse about the conflict between Republican values and Muslim religiosity. While this debate partly reflected conflicts over the “nation’s civil religion” and disagreement over collective values, it also reflected a history of colonialism that still resonated in the experience of post-WWII immigration, so far unacknowledged in discourses on secularism.

Rights, Regulation and Governance: The Path to Development?

Organised by Daniela Comandè and Andrea Wechsler,
Max Weber Fellows

Should, can and do rights, regulation and governance serve development goals? What contribution should, can and do 'soft' or informal modes of norm creation and enforcement in the form of governance make to the attainment of development goals? What implications does the governance approach have for the protection of fundamental rights as opposed to formalized regimes of strict rules, courts and judges? What role does the flexibility and problem-solving focus of the governance approach play in dealing with the constant conflicts that arise between rights and the resulting need to balance and adjust rights?

In the light of these questions, the workshop addressed – in the context of the pursuit of development goals in both industrialised and developing states – the concepts and relationships of rights, regulation and governance. In particular, the workshop focussed on the importance of rights, regulation and governance in providing the conditions for development, and how rights can both advance and hinder development.

History on Trial: Bringing Former Nazis to Court in the Twenty-First Century

Organised by Daniel Lee, Max Weber Fellow, and Marina Aksenova, Researcher, LAW Department

The recent trial of John Demjanjuk, who at the age of 91 was convicted of 28,060 counts of accessory to murder, was the motivating factor behind this workshop. The case, decided many decades after the Holocaust took place, provoked a range of important questions that lie at the intersection between law and history. From the historical perspective, this workshop evaluated the lessons and legacies of the Demjanjuk case by including it within part of a longer historical process. As is well known, former Nazis have, since the end of the Second World War, consistently been tried for their alleged atrocities carried out at the time. Yet what has remained rather unexplored is the particular historical contexts, and national and transnational debates, within which these trials have been held. The theme of temporality thus lay at the heart of this workshop.

From the legal perspective, the Demjanjuk case opened up a number of issues related to both the formation of international criminal law and its current application. Among these issues are the relevance of the principle of legality in prosecution, after the expiration of the period prescribed by the applicable statute of limitations; the importance of specifying the precise role of the accused in the commission of the crimes; the impossibility of obtaining evidence due to the passage of time; and the fitness of the accused to stand criminal trial. To this end, the workshop assessed how far the Demjanjuk case represented a step forward in legal development.

This workshop was held at Villa la Fonte on 7 May 2012. The organisers were touched by the high level participation of the audience and especially by the large number of attendees (lawyers and historians alike) who had travelled from beyond Florence to be present.

Strategies of Economic Aid and Development in the Arab World, from the Cold War to the Present Joint workshop between the MWP, HEC Department and RSCAS, EUI

Organizers

Elisabetta Bini (MWF, EUI), Virginie Collombier (MWF, EUI), Massimiliano Trentin (Department of History, University of Padua), Federico Romero (HEC, EUI), Olivier Roy (RSCAS, EUI)

During the second half of the 20th century, economic aid and development cooperation have been crucial in shaping international politics in the Arab countries of the Mediterranean. The Cold War was particularly important in promoting economic aid as a political and strategic tool to define relations between donor and recipient countries. It was not only used by the two superpowers and by European nations to define their position in the Arab world, but became a tool for North African and Middle Eastern countries to pursue their own economic and political interests. Since the end of the Cold War, international economic aid has continued to play an important role in shaping relations between Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. The Conference of Madrid, the Barcelona Process, as well as the European Neighbourhood Policy and Union for the Mediterranean, heavily banked on “development aid” to define relations among the shores of the Mediterranean basin. Yet the MENA region has experienced increased political instability, economic ups and downs and vast unemployment, thus questioning the actual impact of economic and development aid to the region. The recent development of the “Arab Spring” has shown both the inadequacy and the limits of international development aid. Concerns over migration issues, economic investments, international competition from Eastern Asia and the political orientations of the new regimes, have all played an important role in defining international economic aid. This conference examined the major changes that have occurred over the last sixty years in the economic development of North African and Middle Eastern countries, and the different impact and meanings assigned to international economic aid during and after the Cold War, in order to understand the long-term rationales of the policies adopted by Western states and by recipient countries.

Changing Industrial Relations: Societal Responses to Market Expansion at Multiple Levels?

Organised by Birgit Apitzsch and Daniela Comandè, MWFs

Over recent decades, labour markets and their regulatory institutions in Europe have undergone profound changes. As a follow-up to the 6th Max Weber Programme Classics Revisited conference on Karl Polanyi, this multidisciplinary research workshop addressed the broad question of the relationship between the economy and society by looking at the regulation and deregulation of labour markets. While there is an intensification of political struggles accompanying the commodification and de-commodification of labour at various societal levels – supranational, transnational, national, and sectoral – what becomes increasingly relevant is the question of how society responds to markets in terms of politics, legislation, and more or less formalized types of collective action. Focusing on these dynamic processes in industrial relations requires an analysis of the interrelations between different levels of new forms of employment regulation, and tensions between what is regulated and what is not.

Therefore, the workshop aimed to achieve a better understanding of current developments in industrial relations in Europe by looking at sectors, multinational companies, and country specificities. It opened with Philippe Schmitter's presentation on the prospects for neo-corporatism in the light of the current crisis, compared to the crises of former times. He threw light upon a multitude of processes that potentially destabilise neo-corporatist arrangements, and also discussed what might contribute to their revitalisation. The two following presentations prepared the ground for discussion of emerging transnational systems of industrial relations. Guglielmo Meardi contributed an empirical study of sectoral variation between industrial relations systems in Europe, in comparison to the variation between countries. Evelyne Léonard, instead, compared the social dialogue at the sectoral level with transnational company agreements, and analysed the relations between the two.

Speakers:

Philippe C. Schmitter (Emeritus Professor, Department of Political and Social Sciences, EUI) Guglielmo Meardi (Professor of Industrial Relations, Warwick Business School, University of Warwick)

The Evolution of Social Norms

Organised by Tomás Rodríguez Barraquer, Agustín Casas, Justin Valask, Yane Svetiev, MWFs

How are humans able to cooperate and how has their ability to do so evolved over time?

There is a growing inter-disciplinary literature that attempts to understand the foundations of human cooperation and the ways in which these have been shaped by evolutionary processes. The workshop sought to provide an introduction to this rich field of inter-disciplinary research by relying on lectures by two scholars that approach it from quite different angles.

Speakers:

Giulia Andrighetto (Institute of Cognitive Science and Technologies at the Italian National Research Council in Rome; Max Weber Fellow 2010-2011).

Kenneth Binmore (Professor Emeritus of University College of London)

Legislative Behaviour in the EU Parliament

Organizers: Agustín Casas, Justin Valasek and Tomás Rodríguez Barraquer

Do procedural rules influence the behaviour of legislators in the European Parliament? Do they affect voting outcomes? How does the observability (roll call votes) of the legislators' behaviour affect party discipline? And accountability? In this workshop, Professor Gerard Roland investigated some of these questions, and explored whether there is a selection bias in the Roll Call votes in the European Parliament. Katrin Huber, a former European Parliament insider, discussed Professor Roland's paper from a practitioner's viewpoint, and Pedro Riera (researcher SPS) commented on the paper's analysis.

Speakers :

Gérard Roland (UC Berkeley ; visiting professor ECO, EUI)

Katrin Huber (former member European Parliament; EU Fellow, RSCAS)

Pedro Riera (SPS researcher EUI)

MAX WEBER FELLOWS READING GROUPS

Reading Group on Religion

The idea behind this interdisciplinary reading group – which involved historians, political and social scientists, and lawyers – was to expand the academic horizons of its participants, all of whom are researching topics involving religion. Each meeting was led by a different Max Weber Fellow, who would set a number of thematically linked readings for the group to discuss. These readings either related to their personal research agenda, or were considered paradigmatic in their field. The group would meet either in Villa La Fonte, or in more informal environments in the centre of Florence. Topics included theories and definitions of religion, religion and terrorism, and the economics of religious sects.

Reading group on ‘The Rights of Others’ by Seyla Benhabib

Following the Max Weber lecture delivered by Seyla Benhabib, an additional seminar was organised on 17 June 2012 which centred on a discussion of one of Professor Benhabib’s most important books, The Rights of Others. This seminar was organised by the Max Weber programme in collaboration with the Gender & Migration Working Group and involved participants from the different departments and programmes of the EUI.

The participants got together twice before the seminar, on 10 and 16 May, to discuss The Rights of Others and to formulate the topics to be explored. During the seminar, much of the discussion focused on ‘democratic iterations’, a concept developed by Professor Benhabib and applied in The Rights of Others with regard to the position of migrants. The discussion clarified that democratic iterations can play an important role in determining the substance of immigrant membership – the content of the rights to which immigrants are entitled. The question of who is admitted remains one that cannot easily be resolved. Other topics that were addressed during the discussion concerned the mechanisms that can be used to facilitate democratic iterations, the relationship with ‘traditional’ democratic procedures, whether democratic iterations always bring us closer to a cosmopolitan understanding of rights, the meaning of disaggregated citizenship and the possibility of alternatives for territorially bounded citizenship. Towards the end, participants also shared national experiences of citizenship and integration policies and discussed the problems faced in this respect in different countries.

Social Norms Reading and Research Group

During the 2011-12 academic year, a reading and research group on the topic of Social Norms was organised within the Max Weber Programme. The reading group was proposed by Yane Svetiev (LAW), to continue the successful exploration of this topic in the previous year of the programme, and it was co-organised by Tomas-Rodríguez-Barraquer (ECO) with the participation of Fellows from all disciplines. The theme of social norms and mechanisms sustaining cooperation more broadly is of interest to various disciplines and the group was proposed as part of efforts towards interdisciplinarity in this field of research. As part of the activities of the Social Norms group, participants read and discussed fundamental texts on this topic by authors such as Ostrom, Bicchieri and Elster, but also the work of economic historian Timothy Guinnane, sociologist Mark Granovetter, as well as presenting their own research on issues relating to norms and cooperation. The focus of the group turned to the question of the evolution of norms and for that purpose a multidisciplinary research workshop was organised on this topic on 22 May 2012. The keynote contribution to the workshop was by Kenneth Binmore, economist from UCL, and there was also a presentation by Giulia Andrighetto (MWF, SPS 2010-11) of her experimental research on social norms in the area of cognitive science. The workshop was preceded by a session on alternative approaches and theories to the evolution of norms, which was also attended by Stéphanie Novak (MWF, SPS 2010-11) and Elise Dermineur (MWF, HEC 2010-11).

Reading Group on Economic Theory

The Economic Theory working group met once every two weeks between September and November 2012. In each meeting, one of the Economics Fellows presented their work and received feedback from the other attending Fellows. The meetings each lasted between one and one and half hours and provided an informal setting for the discussion of work at any stage of development. There were seven presentations in total, covering a wide range of topics in economic theory. The culmination of the working group's activities took place on 23 May in an event co-organized with the Social Norms working group which, among its aims, sought to provide all the Fellows in other disciplines with an introduction to the applicability of game theoretic ideas to questions of interest to scholars outside of Economics. The invited speakers at this event were Kenneth Binmore, from UCL and Giulia Andrighetto (MWF, SPS 2010-2011).

MWP ACADEMIC CAREERS OBSERVATORY

Established in March 2007, the Academic Careers Observatory (ACO) of the Max Weber Programme is now in its sixth year of operation. The Observatory is funded by the European Commission and provides on-line information on academic careers, research trends and opportunities in Europe and beyond to young researchers. The ACO monitors the core disciplines which are at the centre of the EUI's and the MWP's research activity: Economics, History, Law and Political and Social Sciences. Relying on the resources available within the EUI and the MWP, the Observatory provides information to the wider public through its website, by organizing periodic conferences and workshops, and through the lively production of research papers and documents.

In 2011-2012, the ACO team worked to develop the website of the Observatory. Of particular focus are the areas devoted to academic career structures across individual states, and job and funding resources. In March 2012 the ACO conducted a survey of the Academic Job Market among the researchers and Fellows of the EUI in order to assess their performance on the job market and also to identify the areas in which they encounter difficulties. The survey concluded that almost 54% of Max Weber Fellows had already secured a position at the time of the survey, with the majority of researchers still going through the application process.

In November 2011 the ACO team was involved in the organization of the 5th annual ACO Conference on 'Enhancing the Efficiency of Research Funding in Europe in the Social Sciences' and the major survey: the Survey on Research Funding for the Social Sciences in Europe. Currently the ACO team is in the process of organising the 2012 conference which will pick up on the theme of academic career progression and opportunity across the social sciences.

EXPANDING THE ONLINE RESOURCES OF THE ACO WEBSITE

In the past year, the ACO staff devoted much attention to the upgrade and integration of the pages of the Observatory website. Forming the backbone of the website are country reports on national academic structures, their accessibility, the positions they offer, the salaries they pay, and more. Special pages with links to job and funding resources, information on discipline-specific career patterns and resources, as well as comparative analyses on relevant academic issues (salaries, gender and age) are available on the ACO webpage. ACO 'career tips' provide users with focused and valuable advice on crucial aspects of today's academic practice, based on information provided by experts who train Max Weber Fellows. The 'Europe and Research' page highlights the features of and funding available under the EU policy for research. The 'Job and Funding Resources' provides a selection of job-search resources, links and descriptions for job databases and funding resources on the internet. The 'ACO events' of the webpage informs users on conferences and workshops organised by the ACO team. In particular, an ACO page on 'National funding opportunities', online since March 2009, has been enriched by the information gathered by the Observatory during the 2009-2011 workshops and conferences dealing with national and international research grants available to researchers.

ACO EVENTS: CONFERENCES AND WORKSHOPS

Academic events organised by the ACO provide both an important source of information and a testing ground for the Observatory on issues related to academic careers, while offering experts and Fellows a venue to discuss such issues. From 2010-2011, research funding opportunities for European researchers was the recurrent theme in both the conferences and the research conducted by the ACO. In November 2011, the Observatory organized its sixth MWP-ACO Conference 'Funding Opportunities in the Social Sciences in the European Research Area: Providers, Users and Professional Associations'. The conference gathered together academics, policymakers and representatives of European and national funding agencies, who discussed the results of the survey conducted by the ACO. This developed the theme of the 2010 ACO report and was the direct continuation of the debates held both during the February 2009 workshop on 'National Research Funding Opportunities Open to International Researchers', and the November 2009 fourth ACO conference on research funding opportunities: 'Openness And Competition In European Research Funding: Grants For International Researchers'. In all events, members of the relevant state agencies participated and informed Max Weber Fellows and the larger EUI community on research grants and schemes available for them.

This year, in November 2012, the ACO will hold its seventh MWP-ACO conference on 'Academic Progression and Opportunity across the Social Sciences' which builds on issues highlighted by its March 2012 survey among researchers and Fellows on the academic job market.

ACO REPORTS AND RELATED PUBLICATIONS

The logic that guides reporting by the ACO is to put the information that the Observatory collects into a more analytical perspective, useful for understanding facts, changes and evolutions in the academic sphere. To date the ACO has released four reports. The first, in early June 2008, titled 'Towards an Open and Competitive European Area for Research Careers' has achieved wide visibility. The report defines different models of national academic structures, and makes a point on issues such as salaries, women's representation in academe, and the importance of the post-doctoral step for young researchers. The ACO staff promoted the report on a number of fronts, and articles have been published in international peer-reviewed journals. The second and third reports were issued, respectively, in November 2009 and November 2010. These were based on the fourth and fifth annual ACO conferences. More importantly, from mid-2010 until

at Time Management Workshop

mid-2011, the ACO staff carried out, in collaboration with the European Economic Association (EEA), the European Sociological Association (ESA) and the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR), a Europe-wide survey, 'Survey on Research Funding in the Social Sciences and Humanities in Europe'. The survey was sent out to: 5,416 European economists, members of the EEA or highly ranked in the Research Papers in Economics (RePEc) database; to 2,180 European sociologists and to 12,348 European political scientists, members of the ESA, of the ECPR, or having published during the last five years in the Top 10 sociological or political science journals, ranked by the ISI Web of Knowledge. In November 2011 the official report on 'Research Funding for the Social Sciences in Europe' was released and received with broad approval. ACO reports and related documents are posted on the 'ACO documents' section of the Observatory's website.

EVALUATING THE MWP: MOBILITY AND PLACEMENT OF MAX WEBER FELLOWS

The ACO has from its inception been deeply involved with the evaluation of the Max Weber Programme, as this provides a microcosm of academic realities that often reveals much broader trends in international academia. First, between March and June 2009, the ACO contributed to the internal evaluation report of the MWP. The evaluation illustrated the increasing visibility of the MWP worldwide and the diversified and multidisciplinary nature of the Fellows' population. Moreover, it showed the high degree of mobility of Fellows and the capacity of the Programme to foster the academic careers of its Fellows by placing them in academic positions higher than those they occupied before joining the MWP. Second, starting in April 2011, the ACO has been actively involved in carrying out a MWP Follow-Up Survey of both former Fellows and a comparative survey of applicants to the MWP, who had similar chances of becoming Fellows themselves. The results of the survey will assist in understanding the real effectiveness of the Programme on the careers of the Fellows. The findings are expected to be published during the Fall of 2011.

CONCLUSIONS:

THE CHALLENGES AND OPPORTUNITIES AHEAD

The current year is particularly hectic for the ACO due to its involvement in a number of research projects. Moreover, the data on people visiting the ACO website unambiguously testify to its increasing popularity and success. In addition to routinely updating the ACO website, the Observatory's team has been constantly involved in the design, implementation and analysis of surveys targeted both at 'internal' respondents (the evaluation of the Max Weber Programme) and 'external' respondents (the three surveys on research funding, carried out in collaboration with the European Economic Association, the European Sociological Association and the European Consortium for Political Research). The expansion of ACO activities has already increased its international visibility, for example, through the presentation in July 2011 at the think tank Bruegel in Brussels, of the results of the ACO-EEA survey on research funding in economics. Such contributions to the overall debate on issues related to the academic careers of young researchers create a bright picture for the Observatory's future.

The Max Weber Programme Team

MAX WEBER FELLOWS

The Max Weber Programme welcomed 46 new Fellows and welcomed back 4 of the Max Weber Fellows of the 2010-2011 cohort on 1st September 2011, bringing the total amount of Max Weber Fellows who have taken part in the programme in the last six years up to 247.

The pool of applicants has also evolved over the years as word has spread and the Max Weber Programme has become more established and well-known. The Programme receives an increasing number of applications from outside of Europe (North America, South America, Africa, Asia and Australia). The number of applications has grown from 555 in 2005 to over 446 in 2006, 784 in 2007, 926 in 2008 and in 2009 the Programme received 1,042 applications. By the end of October 2011, 1,022 applications were received for a Max Weber Fellowship, out of which 43 candidates were made an offer for 2012-2013.

All Max Weber Fellows have an office in Villa la Fonte and all Programme activities and professional training take place in the Villa, which is suitably equipped – with its Conference Room and smaller seminar rooms – to provide for all collective and interdisciplinary activities, as well as for smaller group work. The individual and shared offices are equipped with desktop computers with Skype, a telephone for each Fellow, and a whiteboard for common use. Printers directly serving the desktop PCs are located in the public spaces close to all offices.

Villa La Fonte as home to the Max Weber Programme is significant in many ways: not only does it enable the Fellows to ‘live’ inter- and multi-disciplinarity in daily practice by sharing offices with Fellows from other disciplines, it also enhances the collectivity of the Programme through the simple act of having lunch and coffee together.

THE MAX WEBER FELLOWS SOCIETY WEBSITE

The MWP has recently launched the Max Weber Fellows Society Website. The website, which has both a public and reserved part, has been created to further strengthen one of the most valued elements of a Max Weber Fellowship, namely the possibility of communication and networking across cohorts and disciplines.

The website offers a forum for all current and former Max Weber Fellows: to create their own profile, exchange ideas, share job vacancies, and maybe find a co-author. It also includes a space for the announcement of conferences, publications and other news, professional as well as personal. The idea behind it is to create a special space for interaction within the growing MWP community.

Interested Fellows should follow a few simple steps to register, after which they will have access to both the private and the public part of the website.

AGUSTÍN CASAS (ARGENTINIAN)

Agustín's main field of research is Political Economy, theory and empirics. In particular, he is interested in understanding how formal and informal institutions shape economic and political outcomes. For example, in the first chapter of his dissertation he explains how different candidate selection mechanisms (ie. open vs. closed primaries) affect the type of elected politician, and thus the policies implemented. In the remaining chapters, he builds a theoretical model that explains the optimal vote and turnout buying strategies (clientelism) by an incumbent, and he tests its empirical implications with data from Argentina. After the Max Weber Programme, he will join the department of Economics at Universidad Carlos III, in Madrid.
