Working in the European University Institute

The European University Institute is a postgraduate research institute set up in 1976 by the Member States of the European Union. It is not an institution of the European Union, but an intergovernmental organisation in its own right, funded directly by the signatory Member States.

The EUI consists of four academic departments - Economics, History and Civilisation, Law, and Political and Social Sciences; an interdisciplinary postdoctoral training programme – the Max Weber Programme; an interdisciplinary research centre - the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies; and the School of Transnational Governance, focussing on teaching and training of governance beyond the State. The research students of the EUI are drawn mainly from the graduates of universities in the Member States, with a small number of students from third countries globally.

There are no special citizenship requirements for faculty members. In order to work effectively the professors have to be fluent in English and have a working knowledge of at least one other EU language. Teaching is mostly done in English. PhD theses and seminar papers are mainly written in English.

The Department of Economics

Teaching and Supervision

About 20-25 postgraduate students are admitted each year to our programme leading to the Ph.D. in Economics. The first year consists of a set of core courses in Mathematics, Microeconomics, Macroeconomics and Statistics/Econometric with instruction in English. Some elective courses are taken during the first year and elective course work continues into the second year of the programme. Students then undertake full-time research, leading to the submission of a doctoral dissertation and award of the Ph.D. All students from the EU Member States receive maintenance scholarships (conditional on progress) for 4 years, and for these students there are no fees.

Full-time faculty members teach the equivalent of two 7-week courses per year (42 hours total) as part of the course offer of the programme (holders of joint Robert Schuman Centre posts teach only one).

Each faculty member is associated with one of the research workshops with external speakers (currently, Econometrics/Applied, Micro, and Macro). These normally meet on a weekly basis, and provide a forum for students, faculty, and outside visitors to discuss current research. Finally, there are informal working groups where work in progress of students and professors is presented and discussed.

Since about 20 students enter the second year of the studies each year, and a typical student will stay at the Institute for 4-5 years, each of the 13 full-time faculty members is expected to supervise 10-13 graduate students on average either as a first or second supervisor. New members tend to supervise a smaller number of students in the early years of their appointment and accumulate more as time goes by. Faculty members are obliged by their contract of employment to continue supervision of their first advisees after their appointment expires.

Research

Apart from teaching and supervision, the major part of professors' work is devoted to research. Research at the Institute is supported by an excellent Academic Library. The Library's principal collection consists of traditional resources of printed books, documents and journals, and digital resources. The paper collections include some 538 current printed journals and more than 593,000 printed volumes in law, economics, history, political science sociology and international relations, completed with over 198,000 full text e-journals and over 610,000 e-books, numerous databases and networked CD-ROMs. The Library boasts a highly-qualified team of professionals, which includes information specialists and liaison officers, who provide support to the four departments, the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies, the School of Transnational Governance and all post-doctoral programmes.

The ICT Service is user-oriented and has good resources for research in all areas of social and political sciences and the humanities.

The EUI hosts the Historical Archives of the European Union (HAEU) which preserve and make available to the public the documents produced by European Institutions, some European Agencies, as well as private archives and collections of European movements and personalities.

Each professor normally receives a flat allocation of research funding of currently € 6.500 a year. Supplementary funding may be obtained on a yearly basis from the Institute's Research Council, which is composed of external advisors, for innovative projects and for co-operative projects involving several professors. Research projects should have an international dimension. Although no guarantee can be offered, EUI funding usually allows for the employment of a part-time assistant and for organising seminars and workshops. In addition, professors are strongly encouraged and supported to raise external funds.

Applicants are requested to present a research project for the duration of about five years (which corresponds to first contract). If short-listed, this project will serve as a basis for discussion during the interview, and if appointed, be circulated to members of the Academic Council.

Administrative Duties

Departmental meetings where strategic issues for the department are discussed and students' progress is evaluated are held monthly. One faculty member acts as Head of Department, and meets frequently with the Heads of other Departments and with the President of the Institute to prepare the meetings of the Institute faculty, the Academic Council. All professors are required to be present in the Departmental meetings and in the plenary sessions of the Academic Council.

Within the Department, some colleagues take responsibility for co-ordinating course-work, admissions, exams, placement, and selection of post-doctoral fellows. Others serve on Institute-level committees, dealing with Library and Information Technology issues, with Computing Services, with Admissions, etc.

As to selection of new colleagues, only some members of the Department sit on Committees charged with submitting a recommendation to Academic Council. All members of the Department, however, cooperate in processing the applications. The Department invites shortlisted candidates for a brief visit, including a seminar and opportunities to discuss with students and potential colleagues.

Staff in the Department

The Department of Economics comprises at present 13 professors (out of this 11 are full chairs and 2 are assistant professors, and two full-time professors hold a joint appointment with the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies), a Departmental co-ordinator and three administrative assistants.

Each year a number of post-doctoral and senior fellows join us for a limited period, hosted respectively within the Max Weber and Fernand Braudel Programmes, in order to work on their research projects. These often work closely with an individual professor or group of professors. In addition, scholars occasionally visit the Department for shorter periods, offering brief lecture courses in their fields of interest. Additionally, we receive the visits of colleagues from all over the world, who come and present their work in our research workshops series.

The recruitment procedure at the EUI

The rules governing the selection procedure of full-time Professors are laid down in Annex III the Conditions of Employment of the Teaching Staff of the EUI (CETS).

When a chair is vacant, the Department (in case of a Joint Chair, together with the RSC) submits a profile for the chair to be filled to the Academic Council, which sets up the Selection Committee.

The selection committee is composed of professors from the EUI, external experts, the President of the EUI (consultative voice) and a representative of the researcher students (consultative voice).

According to the Annex III of Conditions of Employment of the Teaching Staff of the EUI, the Selection Board shall:

- assess how well the academic curriculum and experience of candidates fit the profile of the post to be filled;
- take candidates' publications into consideration;
- assess candidates' suitability to fit in the Department's and the Institute's work programme in consultation with the Department;
- assess the interest to the Institute of research planned by candidates.

In the shortlisting process, the committee members first assess the eligibility and the suitability to the advertised profile of the applications submitted. In a second step, after consensus has been reached among the Committee regarding the first step, the Committee discusses the candidates that fulfil the criteria, and in a comparative evaluation, taking into account the needs of the hosting academic unit regarding the position, sets up the final shortlist.

Having set up a shortlist the Committee subsequently interviews the shortlisted candidates and submits a recommendation of one or more candidates to be appointed.

The Committee's recommendation is transmitted to the Academic Council, which acts as a sovereign body for appointments.

Tentative schedule for the present procedure

The schedule we would like to adhere to is the following:

- shortlisting decisions should be made early May 2023;
- job market visits will take place mid-late May 2023;

- the Selection Committee proposal will be submitted to the first available Academic Council (presumably June 2023);
- the successful candidate is expected to commence in January 2024 or as or as soon thereafter as can be satisfactorily arranged.
