INTRODUCTION

The Annual Report of the European University Institute (EUI) on calendar year 2011 has been streamlined with respect to those published in recent years. While past reports were aimed at reporting on and promoting the Institute to both internal and external readers, this year's edition focuses mainly on the requirement of the EUI Convention to be a 'report on activities prepared by the Principal of the Institute and submitted to the High Council' (Article 5 [5] [g]). Thus, the report will, as usual, give an overview of the activities, changes and developments of the EUI in 2011. The outreach and communications objectives, however, will instead be more efficiently achieved in a new EUI Brochure, due out in late spring 2012.

During 2011, the Institute and its three pillars—the Ph.D. programme, the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies and the Max Weber Programme for Postdoctoral Studies—developed very well. Again, more than 100 theses were defended and we continued to receive high numbers of applicants for our doctoral programme. The Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies continues to expand and reinforce its strong activities in the area of inter-disciplinary, comparative and policy research and was once again very successful in attracting external funding. The Max Weber Programme is further developing its unique position in post-doctoral education in the social sciences in Europe. Indicators of the Programme's success are demonstrated by the 2011 application numbers and the career development of its former fellows.

Various members of our academic community won prestigious prizes and grants in 2011, and the EUI now hosts five major European Research Council (ERC) grants. Our faculty and researchers produced nearly 1000 outstanding publications, and the intellectual environment was enriched by several high-level conferences and by visits from leading academics, policy-makers, and practitioners. We also welcomed a number of new top-class academic staff members among our faculty. 2011 marked the creation of the new Centre for Media Pluralism and Media Freedom, and other major research programmes at the EUI, such as the Global Governance Programme, the Migration Policy Centre and the Florence School of Regulation enjoyed a successful year of activities and development. Furthermore, the establishment of the Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa Chair on 'European Economic and Monetary Integration' was launched and negotiations for signing an association agreement with the Russian Federation commenced (and were successfully concluded in 2012).

Apart from these positive developments, however, I must conclude with the news that the Institute was deeply saddened last year by the premature loss of Professor Peter Mair (SPS), who passed away unexpectedly on 15 August 2011. Professor Mair was an extremely valued member of our community, dedicated to the Institute's mission and long-term development. He is greatly missed by the Institute as a dear friend, an exceptional colleague, and a brilliant scholar.

The remainder of this Annual Report highlights the major events and changes in the various programmes and units of the Institute. It also presents information and statistics on our research community and the work carried out here, including research projects, defended theses, and academic events and publications. The last section provides data on our academic population and on the budget and the management of the Institute.

2011 was an especially strong year for the EUI in terms of research, reflecting both the excellence of our academic staff and the attractiveness of the EUI as a site to carry out advanced high-level scientific investigation. In total, in 2011 the EUI received €11,346,131 in external funds for research. Of these, €3,665,829 are for privately-funded projects; €1,443,531 are for publicly-funded projects, and €6,236,771 are for EU-funded projects. For more details on this, please refer to the section on research activities, found later in this report.

With regard to news about large, EU-funded research projects, the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies has been selected by the European Commission to host a Centre for Media Pluralism and Media Freedom. The Institute was chosen as the ideal setting for the new Centre thanks to its inter-cultural and inter-disciplinary nature and for its long experience in the area of European governance; the Centre is financed with a grant of €600,000. Furthermore, the Migration Policy Centre continued its diverse activities with grants from the EuropeAid Cooperation Office receiving in 2011 a specific contribution of €700,000 from the European Commission to operate on a permanent basis (the Centre will be officially inaugurated in 2012). The second phase of the Global Governance Programme's (GGP) budget has been approved, increasing the dedicated budget from €900,000 to €1.65 million. Additionally, a research contract of €650,000 was concluded with the European Commission, allowing the Loyola de Palacio Chair to further assess and research the European Union's climate change policies in a dedicated Climate Policy Research Unit.

In addition to these research projects, in 2011 the number of prestigious FP7 projects and European Research Council Grants coordinated by the EUI rose again. SPS-professor Sven Steinmo won a five year ERC Advanced Grant for his project 'Willing to Pay? Testing Institutional Theory with Experiments'. Three other Advanced Grant projects won by EUI faculty were launched in 2011: 'Mobilizing4democracy' by Professor Donatella Della Porta (SPS); 'ReligioWest' by Professor Olivier Roy (joint SPS&RSCAS) and 'European Regulatory Private Law: the Transformation of European Private Law from Autonomy to Functionalism in Competition and Regulation' (ERPL) by Professor Hans-Wolfgang Micklitz (LAW). In addition, Professor Raffaella del Sarto brought her ERC Starting Grant for the project 'Borderlands: Expanding Boundaries, Governance, and Power in the European Union's Relations with North Africa and the Middle East' to the RSCAS. That the EUI is home to such major projects attests to the EUI's international reputation for academic excellence across the disciplines, especially in areas relevant to European integration.

The EUI's commitment to advance knowledge and debate on issues confronting contemporary European society, including matters relating to the construction of Europe (as requested by the Convention), was furthered with two major new initiatives in 2011. First of all, the EUI launched the first edition of 'The State of the Union' in 2011. This conference brought high-level political personalities from community institutions and national governments, prominent academics, and opinion leaders to Florence and the EUI to discuss the state of Europe in light of the Lisbon Treaty. Given the resounding success of the event, the EUI has decided to repeat it in 2012, focusing on the development and future of the European Union. By establishing this annual event, we also follow the suggestion formulated by the 2007 Strategic Review Group Report to create 'a yearly event to improve the visibility of the EUI among experts, decision-makers and academics interested in European affairs'. Second, in 2011 the Institute also launched the new discussion series 'Debating Europe', a high-level initiative focused on debating the process of European integration and the major issues confronting contemporary European society. This programme is embedded in the Institute's research topics and projects and consists of public events involving high-profile external academics, decision-makers and opinion leaders, along with our own EUI experts. The inaugural 'Debating Europe' lecture was held by the Chairman of the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung and President of the European Parliament ret. Hans-Gert Pötering. His Excellency the President of the Portuguese Republic Aníbal António Cavaco Silva and Aleksander Kwaśniewski, current President of the European Council on Tolerance and Reconciliation and former President of Poland, also were among the distinguished speakers in 2011.

Another new initiative started in 2011 was the establishment of an official ceremony to open the new academic year. The keynote speaker for this event was President of the European Council, Herman van Rompuy. The entire EUI community—faculty, researchers and staff—participated in the event.

The EUI also hosted a number of distinguished speakers and visitors in 2011, including Pascal Lamy, Director of the World Trade Organisation; George Schütte, the German State Secretary at the Ministry of Education and Research; Franco Frattini, Italian Foreign Affairs Minister; Trinidad Jiménez, Spanish Foreign Affairs Minister; Carlo Casini, Chair of the European Parliament's Committee on Constitutional Affairs; Diana Wallis, Vice President of the European Parliament; Yves Mersch, Governor of the Central Bank of Luxembourg; and Lucinda Creighton, Ireland's Minister of State for European Affairs.

With regard to our academic community, the conditions for establishing the Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa Chair on 'European Economic and Monetary Integration' were set in 2011 (the Chair will be inaugurated in 2012) and negotiations for signing an association agreement with the Russian Federation commenced (and successfully concluded in 2012, providing for a new chair in social sciences and four doctoral grants funded by the Russian Federation). Finally, a number of new faculty members were appointed in the departments, including Claire Kilpatrick and Petros Mavroidis in LAW; Youssef Cassis (RSCAS Joint Chair) and Dirk Moses in HEC; and Fabio Canova, Peter Hansen, Andrea Mattozzi and Evi Pappa in ECO. The RSCAS also welcomed a number of part-time faculty members associated with various projects, including Eric Brousseau, Thomas Cooley, Bruno De Witte, Marco Maffezzoli, Richard Rose, and Raffaella Del Sarto.

Last but certainly not least were two important changes with regard to the governance and structure of the EUI. In June, Secretary-General Marco del Panta left his post to return to the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. His successor was Secretary-General Pasquale Ferrara, who arrived from the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. In addition, a new Communications Service was created, merging together staff from the Publications Unit, the Web Unit, and the Secretary-General's office under the new direction of Stephan Albrechtskirchinger.

The above-mentioned news and events are only a very small selection of what took place at the EUI in 2011. More detailed information on other activities, especially the rich offering of academic and training events offered by our departments, the RSCAS and the Max Weber Programme, can be found below in this report.

REPORTS ON ACADEMIC UNITS

THE GRADUATE PROGRAMME

In line with the EUI Convention, the key aim of our graduate programme continues to be training young scholars to complete their Ph.D.s and become top researchers and/or expert practitioners in the fields of Economics, Law, History and Civilization, and Political and Social Sciences. The EUI offers one of the world's largest doctoral programmes in the social sciences. In 2011, 105 doctoral theses were successfully defended at the EUI, with 23 in Economics, 25 in History, 30 in Law and 27 in SPS. In addition, six LL.M theses were awarded in Law. These are excellent figures, considering that around 90% of our doctoral researchers succeed in completing their thesis within four years.

EUI graduates continue to distinguish themselves for their truly international preparation: in 2011, our researchers were immersed in an academic community of scholars hailing from more than 60 countries around the world. While most research foci in the departments are related to the past, present and future of Europe, international trends toward globalization and the issue of global governance are also at the centre of a number of doctoral research projects.

Despite these times of financial crisis, the EUI doctoral programme continues to offer excellent career prospects to its researchers. A trend over the past two years shows 70% of our researchers finding employment in academia, 15% in international organisations and the European institutions, and 15% in the private and public sectors. Moreover, many of our researchers find opportunities outside of their country of origin, which is especially striking amongst those who find academic jobs. A stable trend demonstrates that around 60% start their academic careers elsewhere in Europe and as a result, the EUI plays a key role in the 'Europeanisation' of higher education in many countries.

One of the key factors leading to the fine Ph.D. 2011 results has been a shift over the past decade towards a well-structured doctoral programme. Whilst there are variations across departments, the overall structure of the EUI's doctoral programmes provides Ph.D. researchers with the opportunity to acquire a solid background for their doctoral work and to set out the main lines of their research projects during the first year of doctoral training. The second and third years are devoted to research, field work, data collection, and writing substantial parts of the thesis under close supervision. The final year is dedicated to completing the written thesis in order to prepare for its defence.

Whilst this structure is efficient, replies to questionnaires on teaching and supervision also indicate areas for further improvement. The departments, with the assistance and coordination of the EUI's Doctoral Programme Committee, have committed themselves to addressing the issues raised by these surveys.

In sum, the work of the EUI's graduate programme represents innovative methods in both research and teaching, which results in a unique brand of truly European academics.

The EUI Department of Economics (ECO) brings together top scholars from all over Europe in an outstanding research and teaching environment. The Department aims at producing the future generation of top-class researchers in Economics, working in academia and in the public and private sector, mostly in Europe but also throughout the world. It also aims at producing basic and applied research, contributing both to the advancement of our knowledge about the complexity of the economic systems and to the debate on economic and social issues in the European Union.

The teaching in the doctoral programme is based on formal coursework in microeconomics, macroeconomics and econometrics. Basic, advanced and specialized graduate courses are taken by researchers in their first and second years, for a total of about 18 courses to be chosen among an offer of about 30 courses. The coursework is accompanied and followed by the writing of doctoral theses on a wide variety of relevant topics, under the supervision of a main supervisor and a second advisor from the faculty, which leads our researchers to pursue successful academic careers in leading universities or to make the best use of professional non-academic opportunities in international organizations and other public or private institutions. Before the formal defence of their thesis, the researchers have the opportunity of presenting their research in the 2nd and 3rd year forums, in a set of working groups, and in the structured seminar series in macroeconomics, microeconomics and econometrics, which also provide an additional opportunity for being exposed to the latest research results by top scholars from around the world. Many advanced researchers have also the opportunity of enhancing their teaching skills by acting as Teaching Assistants in the main courses and some advanced courses. The Department is proud of the high appreciation of its teaching and supervision activities, as testified both by the researchers' assessment and by the very good placement record.

The research activities of the Department are concentrated in the three broad areas of microeconomics, macroeconomics and econometrics. Within microeconomics, the main research themes include: banking, financial stability, corporate governance, contract theory with applications to the design of incentives in organisations and markets, general equilibrium theory and financial economics, information transmission in strategic market environments, and social networks, political institutions, electoral rules and political selection. Within macroeconomics, the main focus is on: international economics, general equilibrium models of the international transmission mechanism and optimal monetary policy in open economies, analyses of currency and financial crises and their international contagion, optimal taxation, intergenerational risk-sharing, models of international policy cooperation and international financial architecture, growth theory, monetary theory, labour theory, learning theory, and the macroeconomic implications of labour market institutions. Finally, in the area of econometrics we mention empirical work on finance and growth, households' savings and financial decisions, firms' investment and adjustment policies, culture and economic performance, the transmission mechanism of monetary policy in the Euro area, and other more methodological issues related to the study of non-stationary time series, methods for large datasets, forecasting, aggregation issues, time series models for mixed frequency data, and instrumental variable estimation.

The research output of the Department is impressive both in quantitative and qualitative terms. It leads to publications in the main professional journals and to the presentation of the research in several workshops, academic conferences and policy events. In 2011, we have also continued to organize a series of events, seminars, and courses related to the financial crisis, in addition to the preparation of several academic articles on this topic. Additional details are provided below and in the dedicated page in the website of the department: www.eui.eu/DepartmentsAndCentres/Economics/ResearchTeaching/FinancialCrisis/Index.aspx

Finally, we would like to emphasize that in 2011 the Department has contributed to the debate on economic and social issues in the European Union. In particular, we have organized or co-organized a number of events, including workshops and conferences in addition to the above, such as one on Life in the Eurozone With or Without Sovereign Default? and one on Financial Fragility: Sources and Consequences. We have also actively participated in other more policy-oriented events organized by the EUI. We look forward to a hopefully equally productive 2012.

HISTORY AND CIVILIZATION

It was Lord Acton, a great European, who said that 'If the past has been an obstacle and a burden, knowledge of the past is the safest and the surest emancipation'. Of all the social sciences, history has the advantage of being able to demonstrate that the present is the outcome of historical developments and thus changeable only by building on the past. In most European countries, the study of history is still governed by a national perspective. The Department of History and Civilization (HEC) stands out among research centres across Europe by virtue of its commitment, in its teaching and research, to examining the history of Europe from international, comparative, transnational and trans-cultural perspectives. The reflection on how to teach, as well as to produce a cross-national history of Europe has been in the past, and will continue to be in the future, the main commitment of the HEC Department. This means to open up long-term perspectives on processes of integration (and disintegration) that Europe has undergone in the political, economic, cultural, social, legal and scientific spheres.

Moreover, the HEC Department maintains its commitment to exploring the place of Europe in the wider world through the study of Europe's relations with other parts of the globe. Through its practice of global history, the Department examines past attempts to develop systems of transnational governance, ranging from universal monarchy, to empires, to the multinational balance of power, to transnational economic and legal institutions.

In terms of research projects, the first focus is on the construction of empires, nations and regions as well as on the entanglements among the different social groups within them. Focusing on empires we consider other types of pluri-national polities in order to better understand the construction of Europe. In studying the nation states and regions of Europe our research projects examine issues of borders and frontiers, processes of cultural and intellectual exchange, and the conflicts and the forms of violence that shape European spaces, including war, expulsion, persecution and displacement. The reality and problems derived from European integration in the long run and in its most contemporary developments are also a concern of the department. Thus, the representations of what shaped Europe and the interlinking of different societies from within, and between Europe and other civilisations in the longue durée lie at the heart of our work agenda.

The second research focus is the study of ideas, discourse and memory. The Department is a European microcosm of the debates on the relationship between social, economic and cultural history, of the study of memory and of Europe's cultural and intellectual traditions and heritage. The Department's aim is to be at the vanguard of epistemological and methodological innovation, cultivating a rich and distinctly European plurality of perspectives for the study of different problems and periods.

Apart from its normal seminar activities, the HEC Department expressed its profile through a number of additional initiatives. First, it continues to develop its Summer School on Comparative and Trans-National History, which has become a European reference for scholars working in the field. The global and European dimension of the Department's research has been also enhanced by the creation of the Europe in the World Forum, which fosters discussion and research on the interlinking of Europe with other areas in the world as a way to understand contemporary Europe. Within the activities of the Forum, the HEC Department collaborates with Princeton University on a series of joint workshops on this subject. The Department has promoted different collective activities such as the Graduate Conferences in European History (GRACEH) series and ThatCamp, an important event in the field of Digital Humanities, Digital Social Sciences and Digital History. Finally, it supports the scholarship of young historians through its bi-annual Marc Bloch Prize in European History (15th-21st centuries). In 2011, the department awarded this prize for the best new MA thesis to Margherita Trento (Università degli Studi di Torino) and Florian Wagner (Universität Tübingen / Université de Provence à Aix-en-Provence).

The Department of Law is committed to the study of law in a comparative and contextual manner, with a special focus on European, transnational and international law. The Department is European and international in character, comparative in its approach and contextual in its methods; its mission is to combine the highest level academic legal research with a vibrant teaching environment for researchers. The Department's 4 year doctoral programme and one year research LLM programme are enriched by the interaction of an international body of professors, visiting professors, post-doctoral scholars and researchers, coming from a diversity of legal traditions within and outside Europe, as well as by regular contact with practitioners in both its research and teaching programmes. The Department is committed to maintaining and developing its links with the legal profession, and to encouraging dialogue between the judiciary, practitioners and the academic legal world. Our graduates secure academic positions, posts in the European institutions and international organisations, as well as in private practice.

The legal issues arising from the development of European institutions, the European Union's constitutional order and the development of European law feature prominently in the department's research projects and in doctoral and LL.M. researchers' thesis topics. Europe is not only represented through a distinct body of law (EU law); legal issues in fields such as labour law, economic and consumer law, private law and administrative law reflect the mutual interdependence as well as the diversity of national legal systems and the emergence of transnational structures of governance. International law is also a strong element in the Department's programme with a long-standing experience in human-rights protection, the study of competition law and international trade. A dominant research theme is thus the interaction between legal orders: between national legal systems, European law and international law. Currently the department's research focuses on global governance and the impact of globalisation on legal systems; the role of the EU in international and transnational governance, including environment, social policy, international trade and investment; transnational private regulation; the protection of fundamental rights and the development of constitutional values in the law of the EU; the impact of new modes of governance on EU law; the impact of new technologies, biotechnology and neuroscience; comparative constitutional law; transitional justice; and developments in international criminal law, human rights and counter-terrorism.

The Academy of European Law is dedicated to promoting teaching and scholarship in the fields of human rights law, European Union law, and international law, in line with the EU's mission to advance learning in fields which are of particular interest for the development of Europe. The focus of the Academy continues to be its highly renowned summer courses, its substantial publications programme including the prestigious European Journal of International Law and its Collected Courses series, collaboration with the European Society of International Law, and other research projects. In 2011 the Academy was directed by Professors Loïc Azoulay, Marise Cremona and Francesco Francioni. Dr. Christine Bakker, former EUI Ph.D. researcher was a research assistant to the Academy.

The Collected Courses of the Academy of European Law, resulting from the summer courses, are published annually in four volumes by Oxford University Press. Four volumes of the Collected Courses were published in 2011: The Access of Individuals to International Justice, edited by Antônio Augusto Cançado Trindade; International Humanitarian Law and International Human Rights Law, edited by Orna Ben-Naftali; Market Integration and Public Services in the European Union, edited by Marise Cremona, and Securing Human Rights? Achievements and Challenges of the UN Security Council, edited by Bardo Fassbender.

Finally, the Academy's recent research project on the Privatisation of War (2008-2011), which involved a network of seven universities throughout Europe, yielded a number of important publications. These included two edited volumes, as well as the publication of policy recommendation for EU Regulatory Action in the Field of Private Military and Security Companies and their Services, and the publication of a considerable body of reports on the national regulatory context regarding private military and security companies in 18 states.

The Department of Political and Social Sciences is a leading centre both of the comparative study of European societies, politics and political economies and also of European integration. In a 2010 survey of political science departments in the world, it was listed as the top-ranking department in Europe. Having four ERC grant winners, and running several major comparative projects, the department is also among the most successful ones in Europe in mobilizing research funds.

The department specializes in comparative politics, sociology and social change, political and social theory, and international relations. In the broad-ranging research programme of the Department there is a common emphasis on political and social change within Europe at all levels, the national, the sub-national and the transnational. The Department is also closely engaged with the work of the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies, and has helped to establish and run European-wide research projects like NEWGOV, EUDO and PIREDEU, research projects that contribute to establishing the EUI as a leading centre for the study of political and social change in Europe. We contribute to the EUI's mission also by our dedication to provide doctoral teaching to our students at the highest international level, and by our commitment to provide a flow of crucial research oriented towards European concerns. Two thirds of our graduates secure academic positions in leading European universities and many of them get posts in the European institutions and international organisations.

The Department currently has twelve full-time professors and four new professors will arrive in the Fall of 2012 to replace professors whose contracts have come to an end. The department was deeply shaken and saddened by the untimely loss of Peter Mair, who was a high-spirited and wonderful colleague, a great teacher and also a good friend to many of us. He was a leading political scientist whose work has inspired scholars across Europe. His scholarly contributions are manifold and included path-breaking work on party systems, on political representation and on changes in the nature and functioning of democracy in Europe.

The research interests of our faculty members can be grouped into six thematic areas. The first is the transformation of government and democracy. This field includes new modes of governance and institutional change at state and European levels; European integration; transitions in government and markets and democratisation in Western and East-Central Europe; urban and regional government; federalism; and the comparative study of political institutions, including executives and legislatures.

The second central area of study is social change in Europe and its implications for society, politics and public policy. Of main interest are the critical challenges posed by demographic change and societal aging and their relationships to transformations in the family and the life course, as well as social stratification, inequality and unemployment. The causes, patterns and implications of Migration, which has become a key issue for Europe's future and impacts on a number of other policy fields, is also an interest of some of our faculty.

The third thematic area of interest to our department is the comparative study of public policy at the European, national and sub-national and regional levels, including social policy and welfare states, education policy, urban and regional policies, immigration policy, and defence and security.

Political and social structures and behaviour, including research on voting and elections, and in parties and party systems composes the fourth field. There is also a strong interest in research on social movements and in the study of new modes of social and political participation as well as in electronic democracy and the use of the internet as a form of political communication.

The fifth thematic area examines international relations and security, including theoretical issues in the study of international order, ethics of international relations, internal and external security, and the emergence of Europe as an international actor.

Finally, the sixth field, a concern that runs through many of the Department's research interests, is that of social and political theory. Of particular importance are moral and political philosophy, global justice, theories of action and practical rationality, democratic theory and practice, and nationalism. The Department also has a strong interest in theories of new institutionalism and institutional change.

ROBERT SCHUMAN CENTRE FOR ADVANCED STUDIES

The Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies was created in 1992 to develop inter-disciplinary and comparative research and to promote work on the major issues facing European society and the process of integration. The RSCAS's mission today is to produce the highest quality research in the social sciences on contemporary Europe and to provide a platform for policy-oriented contributions to the public debate.

The research agenda of the Centre revolves around a number of core themes and is continuously evolving, reflecting the changing agenda of European integration and the expanding membership of the European Union. Currently, the core themes are European Institutions, Governance, and Democracy; Migration; Economic and Monetary Policy; Development Policies; Competition Policy and Market Regulation; Energy Policy; Climate Policy; Global Governance; International and Transnational Relations of the EU.

The RSCAS's fields of expertise and close connections to both European and national policy communities allow it to contribute to debate on policy and practice and to bridge the gap between scholarship and practice in a contemporary Europe characterised by processes of change, questioning and debate. In addition, the Centre disseminates and reports the results of its research to a wider audience through the organisation of conferences, workshops and other events; academic publications as well as research reports, working papers and policy papers; the Centre's corporate web site as well as numerous project web sites. The Centre and its projects offer many free research tools as 'public goods', including a 3-D Political Landscape of 30 European Countries produced as the output of the EU Profiler; databases of legal documents, statistics and a wide bibliography on citizenship constructed by the EUDO Observatory on Citizenship; and many databases on migration created by the CARIM and MIREM projects.

The Centre's academic staff includes joint chair holders who are also professors in the teaching departments of the Institute (Law, Economics, History and Civilization, and Political and Social Sciences); programme directors; part-time professors; research fellows and academic assistants working on the Centre's projects and programmes; senior fellows; and visiting scholars. In addition to its own faculty, the Centre hosts a large post-doctoral fellowship programme including Jean Monnet and Marie Curie fellows as well as other publicly and privately funded fellows, and academic and non-academic visitors. Each year it hosts over 30 scholars as Fellows-in-Residence, especially young post-docs starting out in their academic careers, enabling them to develop networks of longer-term collaboration.

The Centre draws its income from a variety of sources, with around two thirds from externally funded grants. It runs an extensive conference programme, and publishes (mainly on-line) working papers, policy papers, research reports, and several research tools. Some of its research activities are organised in special programmes, including the Transatlantic Programme, the Global Governance Programme, the Loyola de Palacio Programme on EU Energy Policy, the Mediterranean Programme and the Florence School of Regulation, covering the areas of Energy, Communication and Media and Transport. Other current and recent research includes several projects on migration, research in the context of the European Union Democracy Observatory, a programme on European monetary union, and projects on security in Europe (internal and external). A continuing priority is to produce research and to stimulate debate on issues of reform within the European Union. Recent initiatives include the launching of the Migration Policy Centre, the creation of a Climate Policy Research Unit under the Loyola de Palacio Chair on Energy Policy and the establishment of a Centre for Media Pluralism and Media Freedom.

Among the new projects started in 2011 are the following:

■ SMALLER STATES IN EU DECISION-MAKING: PORTUGAL IN COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE

Although all EU member states are equal in law, they are unequal in population and resources with more than two-thirds of the member states being small countries. Since the co-decision processes of the EU usually operate by consensus, the ability of countries to make their voice heard is as important as their votes. However to influence policies small countries need to be informed, timely and realistic in what they say. Funded by the Fundação Francisco Manuel dos Santos, Lisbon, this project will systematically examine the role of representatives of small countries in the European Union policy process, with special reference to Portugal. In the next two years a series of reports will be published covering the role of small countries in the European Parliament; interactions between national governments, the European Commission and the European Council; civil society representation; and Portuguese engagement in supranational posts in the European Commission.

■ ACIT: ACCESS TO CITIZENSHIP AND ITS IMPACT ON IMMIGRANT INTEGRATION

The main goals of ACIT are to explore the links between acquisition of nationality and the integration processes and to encourage effective measures for facilitating immigrants' access to citizenship in the EU. In its 18-month programme, ACIT will develop four sets of citizenship indicators on citizenship laws, their implementation, rates of citizenship acquisition and its impact on integration in all 27 EU Member States and accession candidate and EEA countries. The project is co-funded by the European Union's European Fund for the Integration of Third Country Nationals 2007-2013.

■ CARIM INDIA: DEVELOPING A KNOWLEDGE BASE FOR POLICYMAKING ON INDIA-EU MIGRATION

This project, co-financed by the European Union, is carried out by the EUI in partnership with the Indian Council of Overseas Employment, (ICOE), the Indian Institute of Management Bangalore Association, (IIMB), and Maastricht University (Faculty of Law). Its aim is to consolidate a constructive dialogue on migration and all migration-related aspects between the EU and India. This would be achieved by developing a knowledge-base addressed to policy-makers and migration stakeholders in both the EU and India.

■ CARIM EAST: CREATING AN OBSERVATORY OF MIGRATION EAST OF EUROPE

The project, co-financed by the European Union, is carried out by the EUI in partnership with the University of Warsaw (CMR), jointly with a network of correspondents based in the target countries: Belarus, Republic of Moldova, Ukraine, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Russian Federation, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan. Its database is structured into three modules, similar to those of the CARIM project. The research activities are conducted on two levels: national and regional. They focus on specific thematic priorities, such as border management, irregular migration from, through and into Eastern Europe, South Caucasus and Russian Federation; asylum seekers, refugees and mixed flows; circular migration in post-Soviet states; the international labour market and its implications for source and destinations areas; development, remittances and highly skilled mobility; environmental change and population movements; mobility in the context of political and economic transition.

■ MEDIVA: MEDIA FOR DIVERSITY AND MIGRANT INTEGRATION: CONSOLIDATING KNOWLEDGE AND ASSESSING MEDIA PRACTICES ACROSS THE EU

The MEDIVA project, co-funded by the European Fund for Integration of Third Country Nationals (Community Actions, 2009), seeks to strengthen the capacity of the media to reflect the increasing diversity of European societies and thus foster a better understanding of immigrant integration processes at a time when social cohesion and integration policies are put to the test by an acute economic crisis. To achieve this aim, the project (1) surveys existing studies/projects assessing the media capacity to reflect diversity and promote migrant integration (looking at 5 aspects: content of news, news making and programme production, recruitment, employment, training) across Europe; (2) builds an online database of these studies; (3) creates a set of Indicators assessing the capacity of the media to reflect diversity and promote integration; (4) assesses 30 selected media outlets (TV channels, newspapers, news web sites) across Europe on the basis of these indicators; (5) organises five European Workshops to present the database and the indicators and discuss how they can be used; and (6) creates and uses a targeted e-mail list of stakeholders to disseminate the project results (database, indicators, their use for policy assessment/policy design and journalist training).

■ CRIS: THE CROSS-REGIONAL INFORMATION SYSTEM ON THE REINTEGRATION OF MIGRANTS IN THEIR COUNTRIES OF ORIGIN

CRIS is a new three-year research project funded by the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation, directed by Jean-Pierre Cassarino. This research project extensively draws on the methodology tested in the framework of the MIREM project (www.mirem.eu). CRIS is aimed at critically addressing the factors and conditions shaping returnees' patterns of reintegration in their countries of origin. In other words, it sets out to explain why some return migrants contribute to development and successfully reintegrate back home, whereas others do not. Based on a network of partner institutions located in South Mediterranean countries, Africa, the Southern Caucasus and the Western Balkans, the project comparatively investigates the factors shaping returnees' pre- and post-return conditions. Field surveys, based on a large sample of in-depth interviews with return migrants, will be carried out in selected countries of origin. Analytical tools will be provided to study various categories of returnees, their socio-demographic characteristics and their manifold patterns of reintegration. Finally, through a specific implementation method emphasising return migrants' aspirations and rights, CRIS also aims to offer ad hoc recommendations and possible policy measures to sustain returnees' reintegration and their contribution to the development of their countries of origin.

■ KNOWRESET: BUILDING KNOWLEDGE FOR A CONCERTED AND SUSTAINABLE APPROACH OF RESETTLEMENT IN THE EU AND ITS MEMBER STATES

The objective of this project is to construct the knowledge-base necessary for good policy-making in the domain of refugee resettlement in the EU and its 27 member states, with an emphasis on: inventorying actual practices and identifying the best; enhancing consultation and cooperation between the different stakeholders; fostering the sustainable involvement of EU member states in the protection of refugees. Its rationale is to identify the ways in which refugee resettlement in the EU can be quantitatively extended and qualitatively improved. The ECRE (European Council on Refugees and Exiles, Brussels) is a partner in this project which is co-financed by the European Commission DG Home Affairs in the framework of the Refugee Fund Community Actions 2010.

■ PROJECT FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A CENTRE FOR MEDIA PLURALISM AND MEDIA FREEDOM

The general mission of the Centre will be to enhance the quality of the reflection on freedom and pluralism of the media in Europe and to provide knowledge support to European and national policy and rule-making processes. The Centre will pursue its mission carrying out four different activities: theoretical and applied research, debates, education and training activities, and dissemination of results and outcomes. The present action concerns the starting-up and assessments of the Centre's activities. and is co-financed by the EC DG Information Society and Media.

■ ASSESSMENT OF EU CLIMATE POLICIES

The project, funded by the EC DG Climate Action, will carry out and promote evaluation of EU climate policies and provide a forum for EU researchers to discuss results of this research. It includes four main activities: ex-post evaluation of climate policies in Europe, a Climate Policy Forum (through the organisation of two conferences and two workshops), setting up of a research network of researchers from European universities and research institutes to contribute to the assessments of climate policies, development of a web-based platform to promote project results and facilitate interaction within the research network.

■ GGP GLOBALISATION DATABASE

The Globalisation Database, financially supported by the Fundação Francisco Manuel dos Santos, takes a broad view on relevant elements of globalisation by directing the attention not only to the economic and political foundation of global human interaction, but also to its most vital environmental and societal basis. With this particular approach, it seeks to collect and unite most important statistical resources on trends of globalisation. It, moreover, seeks to provide knowledge and facts that add to the understanding of today's world and of fundamental political, economic, environmental and societal changes that affect the global interrelatedness of policies, politics and politics in core areas most strongly exposed to the effects of globalisation.

MAX WEBER PROGRAMME FOR POSTDOCTORAL STUDIES

The Max Weber Programme for Postdoctoral Studies, housed in Villa La Fonte, is a unique and pioneering experience in post-doctoral education in the Socio-economic Sciences and Humanities in Europe (SSH). It provides excellent research facilities, a range of activities to improve academic communication skills (writing, presentation and teaching), and active support to Fellows looking for academic positions. It also offers a range of teacher training possibilities (within the EUI, Florence and abroad), and organizes—often on the initiative or with the collaboration of the fellows themselves—multidisciplinary research workshops and discussions on different aspects of the academic career. The international interdisciplinary character of the programme also helps fellows develop and broaden their research agendas and makes them more competitive globally. All these elements make a Max Weber Fellowship a unique and productive multicultural and multidisciplinary intellectual experience for promising young academics at the start of their careers.

The Max Weber Programme fills an important niche for young academics in the SSH. Due to the expansion of Ph.D. programmes and the limited capacity of European academic institutions to absorb the influx of young academics, a period of post-doctoral study is becoming a normal step in the SSH academic career trajectory, just as it has been for many years in the natural sciences. There is no other comparable post-doctoral programme with a similar range, size and programme in the world. As such, it is a clear expression of the excellence and internationalization of the EUI as a whole.

In addition to the benefits our Fellows accrue from the Programme, they also represent an important asset to the EUI's departments, and particularly to its Ph.D. researchers. As candidates for the Programme must have finished their doctorates no more than five years prior to their application, Max Weber Fellows are usually working at the frontiers of SSH research, and bring fresh knowledge and methodologies to the Institute. They make valuable contributions to the research and teaching activities of the EUI, demonstrating strong motivation to pursue successful research and academic careers. Over the past six years 247 Fellows have taken part in the Max Weber Programme, along with two visiting professors and many visiting Fellows. As the Programme's reputation has grown, the pool of applicants has also developed in interesting ways. As a result, the Programme now receives an increasing number of applicants from beyond Europe. In 2011, for example, we saw especially high numbers of candidates from the United States, Turkey, the Russian Federation, Israel, India, Canada, China, Australia, Mexico and Argentina. The total number of applicants has grown rapidly since the Programme's inception, with increases across the four disciplines, as is shown in the graph next page.

■ ACO: ACADEMIC CAREERS OBSERVATORY

Alongside the Max Weber Fellowship Programme is the MWP Academic Careers Observatory. This Observatory provides a framework for reflection on the situation, problems and prospects of academic careers in the Social Sciences and Humanities in Europe and beyond.

The Observatory explores and compares the structures of academia across countries, discusses crucial questions relating to the international mobility of scholars and monitors the development of research and funding opportunities for young scholars.

The Observatory aims to offer a basic understanding of how different academic systems are structured and provides a thorough description of the formal and informal barriers to career advancement.

In addition, the Institute's experience in surveying graduates and post-graduates, together with the significant volume of data collected over the years, enables the EUI to undertake longitudinal studies of career development, prospects and outcomes in Europe.

LIBRARY AND INSTITUTIONAL REPOSITORY / CADMUS

The mission of the EUI Library is to support the research, teaching and training activities of the EUI. The Library aims to provide the best possible collections, services and information tools in the social sciences and humanities, with a particular emphasis on Europe. Account is taken of the academic profile of the EUI, the ever-growing and diverse community as well as of the innovative research and teaching needs. The globalised dimension of research, the linguistic diversity, and the interdisciplinary and comparative aspects of research are important elements in fulfilling this mission.

Research libraries are in a phase of transition, marked by a rather complex shift from a traditional model based on the centralisation of information resources towards a more widely distributed user oriented model. This shift involves numerous changes that deeply affect overall library management and the role of research libraries. It requires libraries to rethink collaboration among staff, workflows, competences and skills of staff, and to take account of user behaviour and expectations.

In 2011, the Library staff continued to study and follow important developments in Library and Information Sciences and in Open Access publishing in Social Sciences and Humanities, to ensure that collections and related services remained to the highest international standards.

The Library moved an increasing number of paper journal titles to e-only subscriptions, in all cases where paper versions were assured by trusted repositories, and where e-access remained guaranteed, once the licence expired. In 2011, the work on the long-term preservation of digital collections continued, both centralised i.e. Portico, and local programmes i.e. LOCKSS and CLOCKSS. The EUI Library systematically negotiated the inclusion of a preservation clause in licence agreements with all publishers. With the Library of the University of Florence, a pilot project for a common acquisition and preservation programme in periodical titles was set up. The pilot project will be monitored carefully and reviewed regularly.

The Library continued to invest in projects which were initiated in 2010, including rethinking overall user services in view of on-going and major developments in the sector of information provision and IT developments, changed user expectations and new ways of communications and research modes. Staff resources were redeployed to ensure that information for the scholarly community, which is channelled through the Library website and constitutes a central point for accessing and disseminating information, is updated continuously and that services and collections are offered taking account of new user needs and web tools. To respond to these new developments and user expectations, more than seventy (70) user training courses have been offered during the year.

RFID—radio frequency identification—technology has been fully implemented in the Library. The usage of RFID has been integrated in the daily workflow and procedures (i.e. the annual collection inventory, and daily search for missing or misplaced books), thus assuring a proper collection management and increasing user satisfaction.

Library staff participated in several workshops and conferences following the rapidly developing e-environment with the aim to keep ahead of continuous changes in scholarly publications both from the content and technical point of view, thus reinforcing their professional networks.

The Library continued its participation in national and international networks, which resulted in important benefits for the library, staff and the user community. The Library is a member of several associations, including the EUROLIB group consisting of Libraries of the European Institutions and agencies, LIBER, the Association of European Research Libraries, and it is a member of IFLA, the International Federation of Library Associations. The Library will also continue its fruitful collaboration with the consortium of Italian Universities for the acquisition of electronic resources, and welcomed in its traineeship programme young librarians from the Czech Republic, Greece, Italy and Spain.

■ CADMUS: SHARING AND COMMUNICATING EUI'S RESEARCH OUTPUT

The Library is responsible for the management and monitoring of Cadmus, the EUI Research Repository. The mission of Cadmus is twofold: to collect and archive all publications by its members and based on research carried out at the EUI, and to disseminate and communicate the Institute's research output to the international academic community.

In line with the Open Access initiative Cadmus aims at making the full-text publications freely searchable and accessible to all. On 24 October 2011 President Borrell signed the Berlin Declaration on Open Access to Knowledge in the Sciences and Humanities, one of the milestones in the OA movement, making the EUI the 327th university to officially adhere to the initiative. The software used for Cadmus, DSpace, is an Open Archive Initiative (OAI)—compliant open-source software. In the framework of the International Open Access Week and in order to increase awareness of the importance of free access to publications among EUI members, Cadmus staff organised the Open Access week at the EUI from 24-30 October.

At the end of 2011, Cadmus contained nearly 11,500 records with 3,000 available in full-text. Nearly 2,200 records were added to Cadmus during 2011. The continuing increase in the number of records can be seen in Figure 2.

During 2011, major efforts were made to increase coverage and visibility and to improve the interoperability with European and international portals and networks. Cadmus full-text theses are searchable in the European Portal for the discovery of Electronic Theses and Dissertations—Dart, and all full-text publications are searchable in the Digital Repository Infrastructure Vision for European Research - Driver. The project of making the Digital Object Identifiers (DOI) links interactive was finalised, so that DOI links lead to the electronic full-text articles in the EUI Library (where available). Searching from Google scholar, a link to 'fulltext at eui.eu' appears when publications are available in Cadmus. Moreover, the EUI Library is a member of the NEREUS Consortium and is firmly committed to continuing its active participation in this network, allowing staff to share knowledge with colleagues from other research institutions and share best practices, thus creating a network of professional excellence. As a consequence of these initiatives Cadmus has risen 129 places in the Ranking Web of World Repositories, from 264th to 135th.

In 2011 Cadmus staff continued providing assistance in copyright matters, advising authors on their rights, including communicating with their publishers. In addition, to keep up with new developments in scholarly communication and open access initiatives and solutions Cadmus staff attended the OAI7 conference in Geneva in June.

Finally, a number of significant improvements to the Repository were made during the year. These include the creation of a new Cadmus home page and a logo of the repository to increase overall visibility; the mass import of bibliographic data of articles by EUI-members, resulting in a total of 870 article records added to Cadmus; the launch of the 'Full-text inclusion campaign' to EUI members; the addition of Abstracts, Examining Board members and defence dates to the records of all EUI Ph.D. and LL.M. theses from 2007 until 2011; a series of technical updates including better search and browse functions, the addition of tables of contents to the public record view, better web visualization, and so on; and efforts to increase coverage and improve dissemination of EUI research output by approaching new EUI research projects (ERC and FP7 Project Grants) about the repository.

Detailed figures on the EUI research output in 2011 (with Cadmus as a source) is found later in this report in the section on Publications

HISTORICAL ARCHIVES OF THE EUROPEAN UNION

Under the new Framework Partnership Agreement signed with the European Commission on 8 November 2011, the EUI manages the Historical Archives of the European Union (HAEU) and makes them available to researchers. In 2011, 250 additional linear metres of accruals were transferred from the Commission, the Council, the Parliament, the Economic and Social Committee, the Court of Auditors and the European Investment Bank of the European Union, and stored on the premises of Villa Il Poggiolo.

The Framework Partnership Agreement also gives responsibility to the HAEU for acquiring, preserving and making accessible the archives of persons, movements or organisations playing a major role in European integration. In 2011, the HAEU registered important deposits from the Assembly of the Western European Union, the French Section of the European Movement, and the Von Verschuer (Deputy-Director Agriculture) and Kormoss (Executive DG Transport) papers. It also processed important collections from European pressure groups and eminent personalities, including the European Movement International, the European Association of Teachers, and the papers of François-Xavier Ortoli (President of the European Commission) and Uwe Kitzinger (Political Adviser of Commissioner Christopher Soames).

In total, the HAEU processed 8,500 institutional and 2,140 private files, complying with the international standards for archival description ISAD(G) and ISAAR (CPF) and digitised and diffused 1800 new files of records on line.

The Historical Archives constitutes one of the most important centres for historical sources on European Integration. In 2011, over 815 working sessions were registered and 15,814 files were consulted in its reading room. In addition, as a result of the great effort devoted to digitising the collection and improving the Archive's web interface, more than 44,340 files were accessed via the Internet, leading to the publication of some 80 papers, dissertations or theses on European subjects.

In 2011, most of the HAEU's activities were devoted to the preparation of the upcoming installation of the Historical Archives in its new premises, Villa Salviati.

SHARING AND COMMUNICATING EUI'S RESEARCH OUTPUT

Cadmus, the EUI Research Repository, contains the academic publications of its members, where possible available in full-text. The repository is freely consultable online at cadmus.eui.eu and has over 200,000 visits a year.

In line with the Open Access Principle President Borrell signed, on 24 October 2011, the Berlin Declaration on Open Access to Knowledge in the Sciences and Humanities, one of the milestones in the Open Access movement.

The Repository is managed by the EUI Library, and aims at being an efficient instrument and reliable source to measure and provide the figures on EUI research output in the form of publications.

Cadmus is also the source for the EUI Academic Publications Directory, published online only for 2011.

Nearly 1,000 works published in 2011 were recorded in Cadmus. As of 30 March 2012, there were 97 books, 139 book chapters, 250 articles, 108 theses, 170 working papers 144 research reports and 13 lectures and policy papers. A break-down of EUI publications is illustrated in the figure above.

EUI BUDGET EVOLUTION 1975-2011 (2011 PRICE)

As an inter-governmental organisation, the EUI is financed by its Member States through an annual contribution as well as through the budget of the European Commission. There is an additional third income flow of external research funding from public and private resources.

Overall, the 2011 budget amounted to €55,6 million. Of this amount, the contracting member states contributed €26 million, €8.7 million came from the European Commission and €11.3 million were raised via external research funding. Regarding its evolution, the budget has grown on average (in real values) by 6.8% annually since 1975. In 2011 values, the contribution of the contracting states (CS) has increased from €5.7 million (9 CS) to €26 million (19 CS) and the Institute has attracted more income than ever through external research funding.
