Introduction

The European and Transnational Governance Network (hereafter referred to as “ETGN”) is a training and development partnership among eight prestigious academic and research institutions in Europe, offering transnational perspectives on governance issues of the 21st century:

Central European University
College of Europe, Bruges Campus
College of Europe, Natolin Campus
École Nationale D’Administration
European University Institute, School of Transnational Governance
Hertie School, Executive Education
SciencesPo Paris
SDA Bocconi School of Management

Launched in 2019, the ETGN partners share knowledge and competences and deliver collaborative executive education, providing participants with the opportunity to receive the ETGN certificate.

Mission

The mission of the ETGN is to provide mid-career and senior professionals a unique opportunity to deepen and extend their knowledge and competences in the area of public policy innovation in relation to European and Transnational Governance. Therefore, the ETGN develops innovative, interactive and impactful executive education training initiatives, leveraging the comparative advantages of the academic curricula of each of its members. The trainings have a strong orientation towards civic service to include civil society and private sector organisations across the world.

Guiding Principles

Recognition and understanding that 21st century policy-making crosses national boundaries, involving institutions in an increasingly interconnected and interdependent world where public actors must successfully interact with civil society organisations and private sector entities; especially in front of global threat like the Covid-19 pandemic.

Commitment to a consistent proven track record of excellence in European and transnational governance research, education, and policy dialogue;

Foundation and rigour in both social and human sciences, which provides the broader analytical skills to understand world interdependencies in order to successfully address social challenges, via well-designed and broadly evaluated policy interventions;

Transnational knowledge emphasis that enables an understanding of the linkage between evidence-based policy-making, which continuously drives professional learning and skills development.

What we Offer

The ETGN executive education trainings transfer knowledge and competences from the classroom to the workplace and address both current and future transnational policy challenges.

The ETGN’s joint executive education equips participants with the relevant skills and networking experience that will positively impact their long-term career performance while also providing benefits to society-at-large.
